All Is in the Mind.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EVERYTHING IS comparative. When they broke Ravaillac on the wheel, because he had murdered Henry the Fourth, he laughed after one of his legs had been broken a few times, and explained to the executioner that he laughed because he did not feel the blow, after the first few fractures.

In the depths of hell, Lucifer tells his followers that they can make themselves comfortable in their new abode by working and thinking, and, in Milton's fine verse, that everything is in the mind, which can make a hell of heaven, or a heaven of hell.

IN NEW YORK yesterday, on William street, near the Brooklyn Bridge subway entrance, a miserable man with beard half-grown lay on a stone ledge, his hat pulled down over his eyes, in what was probably a drunken sleep.

You would have pitied yourself had you lain there. But the man did not ask pity. It was quiet, few trucks go through that part of William street, opposite the Rhineland building. A wall projecting shut the bright sun from his eyes. He had room to stretch his legs on the stone ledge.

A POLICEMAN, seeing that the sleeper was observed, ordered him to move on, and the poor creature protested:

"Oh, let me be. This is the first comfortable place I have found."

The policeman, compassionate, allowed him to remain, remarking to the observer:

Everything is comparative.

SUNDAY, DAY before yesterday, the Swiss at home and in their churches all over the world celebrated the six hundred and forty-first anniversary of the foundation of the Swiss Confederation.

It is an old republic, and a successful one. It went through the big war without fighting, borrowing or lending, with not a soldier trespassing on Swiss soil.

Switzerland is respected, because she always keeps ready. Every Swiss knows how to use a gun, and must prove every year, until he reaches middle age, that he still knows how to use it, and has it in good order, with ammunition.

OTHER COUNTRIES know that it would cost more to take Switzerland than Switzerland would be worth, especially as the conquering country would not know how to run Swiss hotels as the Swiss run them.

A great people, the Swiss, whether they speak French, German, Italian or a mixture of all three.

They have a beautiful country, and one sound idea, which can be put in few words:

"To be safe, keep ready."

IN SPAIN, Manuel Azana, prime minister and minister of war, talks refreshing common sense. He expects to spend fifteen million dollars a year on the national air force, a good deal of money for Spain, and says:

"We are against war as an international instrument, but we must be prepared to defend ourselves."

WHILE WE talk of elections, Olympics, depression and things in general, Bolivia and Paraguay are beginning a war. Paraguay's government orders mobilization of all the country's armed forces.

The city of La Paz, Bolivia, goes wild with joy, hearing that the Bolivian army has captured Fort Boqueron, one of Paraguay's most important outposts. There will be less joy when the war is over. The countries are quarreling about a boundary line.

This country is fortunate in having no such trouble, with Canada on the north, or Mexico on the south. We have many things to be grateful for, including the remarkable fact that we survive so many kinds of foolishness.

THIRTY-SEVEN million Germans voted in the recent election. The "Centrist and Bavarian Peoples Party," or Catholic Party, appears to hold the balance of power. Hitler made some progress, but is believed to have reached his maximum. Communists gained twelve seats. Socialists lost ten.

A mixed up body is the German Reichstag, not like our comparatively placid Congress, with only Republicans and Democrats, occasionally a wandering Socialist, or a "queer" Republican, refusing to take corporation orders.

ROBERT L. CONROY, accused murderer, counterfeiter, "badger game" worker, wanted in many cities, is wanted no longer. He killed himself in New York after killing a woman. Police called her a "young, platinum blonde," who had helped him in his crimes, including the badger game.

IN THAT GAME, the woman accomplice persuades men with money to make fools of themselves. The male criminal breaks in the door, declares that his honor is outraged, threatens to shoot, accepts cash balm. Or he takes photographs and later sells them to the fool.

Deny Lancaster Delay Plea in Murder Trial

MRS. J. M. KEITH MILLER

Mrs. Keith Miller Hears Air Partner Lose First Tilt

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Capt. W. N. Lancaster, formerly of the British Air Corps, went on trial in Dade County Circuit Court today charged with murdering Haden Clarke, a young writer, in a love triangle involving Mrs. J. M. Keith Miller, the Australian flier.

Clarke was mysteriously shot April 21 in the bedroom he and Lancaster occupied in her home here.

James M. Carson, chief of the defense counsel, moved in vain for a continuance of the trial until September 15 as soon as court opened.

He asserted Dr. P. L. Dodge, a specialist who was to be one of the chief witnesses, is ill and unable to attend the trial.

The motion declared Dr. Dodge, head of a commission that conducted an autopsy over Clarke's exhumed body several weeks after death, was convinced the youth was a narcotic addict and committed suicide.

Judge H. F. Atkinson denied the motion after the roll of 100 prospective jurymen was called.

A crowd of curious, including many women, jammed the court house corridors before court was opened.

Lancaster and his attorneys and Mrs. Keith Miller appeared in the courtroom early. Both appeared nervous but proclaimed their belief he would be acquitted.

RACKET KING QUIZZED ON VOLPES

Plates on Murderers' Auto Supply New Clue in Hunt

Developments were swift today as the Homicide Squad investigated the massacre of the three racketeering Volpe brothers.

Joe Tito, friend of the Volpes and reputed kingpin of two rackets—beer and numbers—was questioned by homicide detectives.

Sam Lakin, who once pleaded guilty to a liquor charge, was arrested after he had denied witnessing the killings.

The Sun-Telegraph learned that the license plates for the gunmen's car had been issued one day before the shooting from Harrisburg.

Joe Tito, a reputed kingpin of two rackets — beer and numbers — was questioned by the homicide squad today in connection with the massacre of the three Volpe brothers.

Tito admitted having talked with Johnny Volpe a few minutes before the murders but denied any knowledge of the crime, according to Lieut. Frank Ferris. Tito was released after questioning.

Questioning of of the Soho political power was a part of the homicide squad's movement to bring in friends or enemies of the murdered Volpes.

ADMITS MEETING VICTIM

According to Ferris, Tito admitted meeting Volpe in a Fifth avenue barber shop last Friday afternoon.

Volpe said he was in a hurry and Tito offered to take care of the barber's bill, Ferris quoted Tito. After being barbered himself, Tito paid both checks, left the shop and heard the shouts of newsboys telling of the Volpe killings, Ferris said.

Tito was questioned a few minutes after Sam Lakin was arrested in the investigation.

Lakin was in the liquor racket as recently as last December, police said.

SAYS SUSPECT LIES

Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the homicide squad, locked up Lakin after Lakin had denied that he was in the Rome Coffee Shop, at 704 Wylie avenue—Volpe racket headquarters—last Friday when gunmen killed Johnny, Arthur and Jim Volpe. Lieut. Ferris said:

"Lakin is lying. He was in the place at the time of the shooting and knows something about these murders."

Ferris said he was also looking for Lakin's chauffeur, said to have been in a parked car outside

Bandits Bind Girl, 3 Others On North Side

Binding three employes and a customer of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, in the Real Estate Savings and Trust Company Building, 516 Federal street, with adhesive tape, two well-dressed bandits today escaped with $100.

A few minutes before the bandits, with drawn guns, had entered the offices of the company, J. W. Amaismeier, clerk, deposited $1,000 insurance premiums in a bank. The bandits overlooked $150 or $200 in cash in a cash drawer.

The pair entered the two offices of the company, covering R. E. Fitzgerald, manager; Anna Baumann, stenographer; Amaismeier and Alexander H. Bell, of 1303 Walters avenue, Millvale, the customer. Forcing all four to lay face downward on the floor the robbers bound their hands behind their back and sealed their lips with tape.

Five minutes before the robbery 25 agents of the company had left an adjoining room.

BULLETIN.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—"Resign or be dismissed." This ultimatum was sent to Chairman William D. B. Ainey, of the Public Service Commission by a Senate committee late this afternoon.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—W. D. B. Ainey, chairman of the Public Service Commission, will be called before a special Senate investigating committee this afternoon or tomorrow to answer charges of misconduct in office.

The investigating committee did not go into session until mid-afternoon to decide a course of procedure. John P. Connelly, attorney for Ainey, and Attorney General William A. Schnader sat with the members. Schnader is to become prosecutor for the committee if a trial of Ainey occurs.

Connelly had conferred with Ainey before the meeting the committee, but it was intimated there was no immediate prospect of a resignation by the chairman. He has been under extreme pressure for the last 20 hours to retire.

As exclusively forecast in the Sun-Telegraph Sunday, the Senate last night adopted a resolution for immediate action against Ainey, without waiting for his appearance before Gov. Pinchot.

Auto Injures Man Watching Ball Game

HOME OWNERS MAY LOSE VOTE BY TAX RULE

Poll Receipts Denied Where Levies Are In Arrears

Many home owners will be denied a vote at the next election because they are unable to pay property taxes, unless the County Commissioners revise their collection rulings.

Non-property owners, however, can obtain the receipt necessary to register and vote, by simply paying the 50-cent poll tax.

The condition which threatens to disfranchise owners exists because, under the present system of tax collection poll tax and property tax, when the owner lives in the same ward or township as that in which his property is located, are assessed together and, it has been ruled, must be paid at the same time. If his property is outside his own ward or township, the property tax is billed separately, and he is able to pay only the poll tax.

The unfair condition was admitted by County Solicitor J. P. Fife, who stated the Commissioners were working out a plan whereby property owners will be able to obtain a poll tax, despite non-payment of property tax. He said:

"It is manifestly unfair that voters, not property owners, are able to obtain a poll tax receipt, while home owners, unable to pay their property tax, would be disfranchised."

Voters owning several pieces of property with taxes due, however, will be permitted to separate the assessments, Fife said. A home owner would thereby be able to pay taxes on the residence he occupies, while being permitted to default on his other properties. Each case will be judged on its individual merit, Fife added.

Beer Return Foreseen in House Bill

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The House today passed the Haws resolution to permit manufacture of beer in Pennsylvania when and if authorized by federal law. The vote was 86 to 68.

The vote was the second in two days on prohibition measures.

Last night the House voted, 91 to 89, against discharge of the Law and Order Committee from consideration of the Bauer bill to repeal the Snyder - Armstrong state enforcement act.

The Haws resolution directs the Ways and Means Committee to introduce a bill to permit the manufacture "of such malt beverages as may be permitted to be manufactured and sold under any modification of the Volstead law," and to regulate the sale and tax the product in the state.

FIRST VICTIM OF TYPHOID STRICKEN

Camp in Sullen Mood As State Acts to Balk Epidemic

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 2.—Federal officers today invaded the B. E. F. camp in search of tents alleged to have been stolen in Washington and arrested one man charged with their theft. Warrants are out for two others.

As the federal officers began the search, state sanitary officers began a survey of the camp, ordering many changes and improvements, and the vets grew sullen with the sudden turn of events.

TYPHOID IN CAMP

A number of cooking utensils were ordered destroyed.

Vaccination of the upwards of 5,000 in camp to guard against typhus and smallpox was recommended, as one case of typhoid was reported. The typhoid victim is Harry Lowery, 45, of Tampa, Fla.

United States Deputy Marshal J. G. Lowers, of Pittsburgh, with four Washington officers came here this morning, armed with a search warrant for 32 tents lent to the veterans in Washington and said to have been taken when the army was driven out of that city. They also carried warrants for the arrest of three men, charged with the theft. The search warrant was served on Camp Commander William Waite, in the office of Mayor McColskey, staff headquarters for the veterans.

Isadore Kanner, formerly of the staff at Camp Bartlett, where it was alleged the tents were stolen, was arrested on a larceny charge and held for a hearing before a United States Commissioner. The officers said they had warrants for Frank Muggie and "Buck" Reynolds.

Lowers said he and the Washington officers were also seeking Doak E. Carter, in charge of the veterans here, but Carter was said to have gone to Washington.

HUNT FOR TENTS

OLYMPIC GAMES IN FULL SWING

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—With the proud green of Ireland flying from the victory mast, the games of the tenth Olympiad moved forward today.

Five sports were on the day's program. Track and field, fencing, wrestling, cycling and the modern pentathlon are in full swing.

The first event of the pentathlon, the 5,000-meter steeplechase ride, will bring equine athletes into action for the first time in the present games. Twenty-six horses will be assigned at the last minute to as many riders.

The Irish twice heard their anthem played and their colors unfurled as Robert Tisdall sped to victory in the 400-meter hurdles, and Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, on his last throw, displaced his Finnish rival V. Prohola, and retained his Olympic hammer-throwing crown.

Did Eddie Tolan or Ralph Metcalfe win the "Fastest Human" race, the 100-meter final of the Olympic Games at Los Angeles, yesterday? Critics and spectators dispute the decision of the officials in the close finish.

The camera shows Metcalfe breasting the tape first.

TWO NATIONAL BANKS TO PAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Efforts for the reorganization of the Exchange National Bank and the Monongahela National Bank in Pittsburgh have been abandoned and steps are being taken for their prompt liquidation, it was announced at the office of the Comptroller of Currency today.

The following statement was made at the office of the Comptrollers:

"Announcement of a dividend for the depositors of each bank will be made in the very near future."

He said very serious attention had been given to plans for reorganization, and that, while a canvass was in progress, no announcement could be made.

It was learned that funds from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation possibly may be obtained. This would enable the payment of a larger initial dividend, but would delay the date of payment somewhat.

Pu-Yi 'Confers Death Honor' on Ex-Favorite

By JOHN GOETTE
International News Service.

PEIPING, Aug. 2.—Emulating the ancient Manchu emperors who sent silken cords to their enemies as a polite hint that suicide would be pleasing to the imperial will, Henry Pu-Yi, former boy Emperor of China and now President of Manchukuo, has conferred the "honor of death" upon his erstwhile mistress, it was learned today.

She is Miss Wan Siu, beautiful 20-year-old Chinese girl.

She was located in a modest hotel here in difficult financial straits. She showed the reporter a message signed by Pince Pu Chieh, brother of the former emperor, in which she was taken to task for bothering such a high personage with low requests for money. The letter said:

"His majesty desires to confer upon you the honor of death."

Until a year ago, Wan Siu lived in splendor in Pu-Yi's Tientsin establishment. She got into trouble with his wife, however, and was given a legal separation, with a promise of 400 Chinese dollars a month for life, which she claims has not been forthcoming.

Extortion Plot Balked By Pittsburgh Widow

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. James M. Selden, wealthy Pittsburgh widow, got a letter demanding that she send the writer $5,000.

Instead she sent a policeman wrapped up in a blanket—and the result was the arrest of Anthony Barile, of Jamestown.

The letter sent to Mrs. Selden's summer home at Bemus Point directed her to send her chauffeur with the money to a country crossroads. A state police sergeant wrapped himself in a blanket and hid in the rear seat of the car. The chauffeur was given a dummy package and told to drive yesterday to the cross-roads.

The state trooper popped up at a crucial moment and said he saw Barile about to accept the package.

Mrs. Selden's Pittsburgh home is at 414 South Dallas avenue, East End. With her at Bemus Point is her son, James M. Selden, Jr. Mrs. Selden's late husband was an owner of the Selden Company chemical works. The Selden holdings were sold in 1929.

RACKET CHIEF QUIZZED IN VOLPE CASE

the Volpe place during the shooting.

Lakin was brought in for questioning by two homicide detectives who reported waiting hours for him at the Aberdeen Apartments in Bayard street, Shadyside.

Lakin was charged with being a suspicious person.

FINED ON DRY CHARGE

Federal records showed that last December he had pleaded guilty to possession of 2,832 pints of whisky, 40 barrels of beer and five half-barrels found in a North Side garage. He was fined $200, two others were paroled and one was discharged.

The Sun-Telegraph today learned that the license plates found on the killers' car when it was abandoned in Soho had been issued from Harrisburg just one day before the shooting. Circumstances in which the plates were obtained indicate that the detectives might learn something from one Sam Paggani, if they can find him.

Short, well-dressed and flashing a roll of money, a man who said he was Paggani and gave a fictitious address in Peebles street, Wilkinsburg, appeared at the Universal Motor Company in Brownsville road, Mt. Oliver, Monday of last week.

TRACE AUTO PLATES

Without examining the motor, he bought a 1927 Buick, price $40, and offered a $50 bill in payment. He predicted he'd trade the car in within 60 days.

He arranged to obtain plates through the Universal Motor Company.

The plates arrived Thursday. Paggani returned, claimed car and plates and drove off. The next day those plates were found on the abandoned Ford sedan in Soho. Detectives are seeking to learn whether Paggani bought the car simply to obtain the plates for the killers.

With Assistant District Attorney Earle R. Jackson sitting in, Ferris also quizzed a third man today. He was Charles Modarelli, of Squirrel Hill, described by Ferris as a former numbers racketeer, now "broke."

Modarelli denied that, finding Johnny Volpe in the Fifth avenue barber shop 20 minutes before the shooting, he told the underworld boss he was needed immediately at his headquarters.

Ferris said Modarelli had admitted trying to "make a touch" on Volpe and failing. He quoted Johnny as replying:

"I'm pretty well cleaned out, myself. I just fixed up a mortgage of $2,600 for a widow."

PROGRESS IN PROBE

This may explain the disposition of the $2,600 which Johnny had withdrawn from a bank the morning of the shooting.

Modarelli admitted leaving the shop with Volpe and walking as far as the coffee shop, where Modarelli left him, Ferris reported. On the walk up the avenue they stopped in a drug store in the Plaza Building and the boss of the Volpe liquor racket drank a milk shake, Ferris said.

Ferris said he was inclined to believe Modarelli's story, which did not conflict with Tito's.

With the questioning of the two witnesses and unexpected help from the United States Department of Justice, the investigation today appeared to be moving forward.

The Department of Justice's action revealed that the Volpe mob had been under secret investigation for a year and that the government was ready to prosecute the mob openly when the massacre occurred.

SECRETS TURNED OVER

To Lieut. Frank Ferris, C. O. Stout, special agent in charge of the department's office here, turned over the secrets unearthed by government agents. These secrets were:

The names of Pittsburgh racketeers who had motives for importing "gorillas" to rub out the Volpes.

The dealings of Johnny Volpe and his brothers, Arthur and Jim, all victims of the massacre, with the powerful Ownie Madden liquor ring in New York.

The Volpes' "chiseling" in on the Pittsburgh numbers racket, which may have been the motive for the killings.

The Department of Justice claims it had prepared a liquor conspiracy case against six of the Volpes and 12 of their henchmen, but these plans were disrupted with the killings. However, with the case already in the hands of the United States attorney, it will be presented to a federal grand jury in modified form. The department embphasized that no records had been turned over to the detectives.

BAZZANO HELD

One other man is being held in connection with the massacre. He is Sam Bazzano, 27, an employe of the coffee shop. Today, in Central Police Court, he was held for court on a charge of possessing firearms. This assures that he will be available for questioning, although he insistently denies that he knows the three gunmen he saw slay the Volpes. Ferris testified the license for the coffee shop was in Bazzano's name.

The detectives are still checking, through the manufacturers, on the three revolvers found in the car abandoned presumably by the killers in Soho. They have also asked Cleveland police to arrest Sam Paggano, in whose name were registered the license plates found on the car.

The widows of the three Volpes, according to Ferris, will be questioned Friday.

MAYOR QUIZZED

Mayor Kline, who returned yesterday from his summer home in Madison Lakelands, O., and said he thought the triple slaying "one of the worst things that ever happened in Pittsburgh," was asked this question:

"Is there anything to the story that the crime was connected with the reorganization of city rackets?"

The Mayor replied:

"I don't know what you mean by reorganization of rackets. You'll have to get your dope from the person who told you the rackets were being reorganized."

The Mayor and Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh conferred yesterday, after which Walsh said that the police have a witness who can identify the slayers. However, the witness was not named.

LOUIS BACK IN JAIL

Louis Volpe, one of the remaining brothers, was back in the county jail today, having been allowed permission by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to attend the spectacular funeral of his brothers yesterday from their apartments in Wilmerding. Louis, in jail for a violation of the liquor laws, returned 15 minutes late with his custodian, Deputy Marshal David Goldman.

He was only one of 7,000 or more who followed the funeral parade to the Grandview Cemetery at East McKeesport.

Champ Clark's Son Aspires to Senate

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Prohibition, political "bossism" and economic questions confronted Missouri voters as major issues in today's primary election.

In the Democratic senatorial race, Bennett C. Clark, son of the late Champ Clark, and an outspoken wet; Charles M. Hay, veteran prohibitionist, and Charles M. Howell, who announced he stood on the Democratic national platform's repeal plank, are the principal contestants.

COUNTY RELIEF LOAN PROPOSED

Allegheny County poor directors are considering issuing $800,000 bonds to finance relief work through the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

The possibility of the county commissioners making a loan to the poor directors out of some inactive accounts until they are able to raise the money by issuance of bonds was discussed by the commissioners yesterday. Solicitor J. P. Fife's opinion was that the commissioners have no authority to make a loan. Commissioner Charles C. McGovern said:

"If there is any way we can give the Emergency Relief any more money I am for it."

Reider Hurt in Auto, Sells Wreck for $20

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Representative Howard F. Reider, of Arnold, Westmoreland County, was legislating as usual last night, but under difficulties.

With a broken collar bone and lacerated scalp he was in his seat in the House after an automobile accident, which reduced his car to junk, 1½ miles east of Bedford. Climbing from the demolished machine, Reider promptly sold the wreckage for $20, was treated and bandaged by a physician and came on to Harrisburg.

Jurors Hear County Officials on Airport Hauling Job

Chairman C. C. McGovern, of the Board of County Commissioners, and former Commissioner E. V. Babcock both testified before the grand jury today about the $200,000 contract given Watson Bowser to haul slag to the county airport. This is the contract which Bowser is said to have sublet at a lower figure.

Babcock, a member of the board when the contract was awarded, was before the grand jury 40 minutes, McGovern following.

District Attorney A. T. Park and his first assistant, George F. P. Langfitt, spent yesterday afternoon questioning officers of the Duquesne Slag Company before the jury.

Late in the day Park had six new subpenas issued. He said that because of the new developments the grand jury could not make its presentment until late tomorrow or Thursday.

FIND KIDNAPED PAIR AT BANK

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Two men who gave the names of Jack Liggett, 25, Charles Town, W. Va., and Carl Whittington, 21, Wheeling, W. Va., were arrested here today as they entered a bank accompanying George N. Davis, of Richmond, and R. K. Robertson, of Lewisburg, W. Va., who were kidnaped from the West Virginia City last night.

Bank officials had been notified Davis was on his way to the bank, and previously had been informed by West Virginia bankers of the alleged kidnaping.

Officers participating in the arrest said the two men who entered the bank with Davis and Robertson were armed and that when a move was made to arrest one of them, the other drew a revolver and threatened the officer, who also had his weapon drawn, however.

At the bank it was said Davis had attempted to withdraw $10,000 and that his manner indicated he might have been drugged and was not in full possession of his faculties at the time.

SEEK TO PROVE 'COAL TRUST'

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Witnesses in the government's anti-trust suit against Appalachian Coals, Inc., and 136 coal operators today testified before a three-judge Federal Court here that they bought coal from particular mines instead of from mining areas.

The suit involves a test of how far the Sherman law goes in controlling formation of co-operative groups and the government is seeking to dissolve Appalachian Coals, contending it is a combination in restraint of trade.

PRIESTS FIGHT COLLEGE FIRE

VILLA NOVA, Pa., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The monastery at Villa Nova College today was threatened with destruction by fire which started on the fourth floor of the four-story building.

The flames spread so rapidly that fire companies from the surrounding towns and two companies from West Philadelphia were summoned.

Twenty priests, among them members of the faculty, left the building safely and with seminarians fought the flames. A number of nuns, the latter summer students, helped carry furnishings from the burning building.

Three firemen were overcome by smoke after two spires and the roof on the west wing of the structure collapsed.

The monastery adjoins College Hall which was destroyed by fire in 1928 and rebuilt. The monastery was built in 1900 at a cost of $200,000.

Convict Sends $20 To Man He Robbed

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Joseph (Specs) Russell, serving 54 years in the Ohio State Penitentiary, today sent Louis Wider $20 to reimburse him for a store robbery in 1928. Russell first offered to return $120, the amount taken in the robbery, but Wider refused it, saying that $100 had been covered by insurance. Russell earned the money writing for music magazines.

VOLPE FUNERAL SADDENS GUARD

The Volpe funeral was the saddest affair he ever attended, Deputy United States Marshal David Goldman said today, and he hopes he will never be detailed on a like assignment again.

Goldman was detailed to accompany Louis Volpe, brother of the three dead gangsters, to the funeral from the county jail, where Louis is serving a year's sentence for violation of the prohibition laws, and to return him to the jail at the end of his leave. Goldman described the funeral:

"The saddest thing of all was when he went into the apartment. The women and children were all around the caskets crying.

"Louis looked down at the boys. Then he burst out crying, too. It was mighty sad. He just broke down.

"Finally we got to the cemetry and the crowd pressed in there. We didn't even get out of the carriages, the crowd was so dense. We watched the caskets being lowered and then we left.

"Louis spent the afternoon talking to his family and friends.

"No, I didn't hear anybody talk about revenge. There was nothing like that. It was too sad to think of revenge.

"We were held up by a traffic tangle coming back and were 15 minutes late."

Assembly Approves 'Lame Duck' Measure

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—The General Assembly has approved the proposed amendment to the federal Constitution eliminating the "lame duck" sessions of Congress.

The House today passed finally a resolution of Senator Coyne, Allegheny, approving the proposed change. It previously had passed the Senate.

$12,000,000 PROVIDED IN MEASURES

Cosmetics and Soft Drinks Facing 10 Pct. Levies

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The House plan to raise $12,000,000 to finance the new Talbot unemployment relief bill was completed today with the introduction of bills to levy a 10 per cent sales tax on cosmetics and soft drinks.

The bills, supplementing a third tax of 1 cent on every 10 cigarets, were introduced today by Representative Hermansen, Luzerne, who said he had offered them at the request of the Ways and Means Committee.

SPECIAL SESSION

The committee, headed by Representative Philip Sterling, Philadelphia, went into special session late last night and did not complete its discussions until early this morning.

At a meeting of the Senate steering committee today, it was tentatively decided to adjourn tomorrow until Wednesday of next week, while the House begins on Monday movement of some of the tax measures resting in the Ways and Means Committee.

This committee tomorrow night will consider a group of revenue-raisers, greatest favor now resting on an occupational tax proposal, the tax to be levied for only one year, and to be known as a welfare emergency tax. Under its suggested terms, occupations would be taxed on the basis of income, probably starting with a flat tax of one dollar.

REVENUES ESTIMATED

The cigaret tax, previously submitted by Hermansen, would raise $6,000,000 a year, Sterling estimates. The cosmetics and soft drinks levies would produce the other $6,000,000.

The new Talbot bill was passed by the House and sent to the Senate last night after its original relief appropriation of $24,000,000 was halved by the House last week.

The soft drink and cosmetic measures would require all dealers to be licensed and would collect the tax through the sale of stamps to be attached to each package sold. In the case of soft drinks sold by the glass, the dealer would make a separate return to the state.

Representative Fred Patterson, Beaver, held out hope for the House that new taxes would not be necessary to finance relief. In an impromptu speech he asserted no deficit exists in the State Treasury and that passage of all the economy bills would leave $27,000,000 for this purpose.

ESTIMATE BASIS

Patterson based his estimate on the state expenditures for the first 13 months of the biennium. These averaged $7,000,000 a month, he said, a rate at which the total expenditures for the biennium would fall $27,000,000 below the $192,000,000 total of 1931 appropriations.

Representative Robert Kleckner, Lehigh, lauded Patterson for his work on the estimates and said a step has been taken toward preparing a "readable bank statement" on state finances. Such reports, he added, are what the Legislature needs most to guide it in enacting relief, tax and economy measures.

PINCHOT GOES FOR AID

While the General Assembly continued its search for new sources of state revenue, Gov. Pinchot left for Washington to press the state's claim for $45,000,000 federal aid from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He said he was "keenly anxious" to avoid delay in securing this money and expected to ascertain personally what obstacles exist to immediate action on the Pennsylvania application and the possibility of removing them. With him he took voluminous data on the unemployment conditions in the state.

The Black (Fayette) bill for a flat, 1 per cent emergency income tax was not called up by its sponsor when the House reached it on the second reading calendar. Black explained later action had been postponed to permit further study of the bill and that the House may be called upon to consider it after the noon recess today.

Mate's Slayer Attends Rites, Stirs Riot

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Dorothy Pollak, 26 and comely, whose appearance at her husband's funeral precipitated a near riot as thousands crowded into the cemetery to see her, was back in the county jail today planning her defense against murder charges.

At the cemetery yesterday workmen and police struggled in vain to keep thousands who wanted to view the self-made widow from tramping over the graves. A woman and two children were shoved into Pollak's grave by the pushing crowd as it struggled to approach.

Amid cries of "she ought to burn," and other imprecations which delayed the minister in reading the service, the widow, handcuffed to her guards, sought to jump into the open grave. During the confusion a woman raised an umbrella, swung it twice at the widow, and struck the guards.

As she was led away from the cemetery and back to her cell she sobbed:

"I'm going to miss him. When I die bury me in the same grave."

Billie Burke Invited to Direct 'Follies'

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The widow of Florenz Ziegfeld, the beautiful Billie Burke, may carry on his plans for the Follies.

A. C. Blumenthal, of the Ziegfeld Production Company, said Miss Burke had been asked to return to New York from Hollywood and take the producer's place in the presentation of two extravaganzas which he had planned before his death here July 22.

One of these productions will be another Follies. The second will be an operetta composed by Jerome Kern.

Miss Burke has been asked, Blumenthal said, because it was felt that her long acquaintance with the ideas of the producer fitted her admirably for the task of continuing his work. But Miss Burke is not so certain. She said:

"I am uncertain as to whether I could, in any remote sense, fill Mr. Ziegfeld's place, as he has been a distinct personality in the American theater. Furthermore, I may return to Hollywood to accept motion picture offers."

INFANT GASSED IN BONUS RAID NEAR DEATH

Baby Was Recovering From Illness When Army Attacked

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—An 11-week-old infant, gassed in its mother's arms Thursday night, when the soldiers ordered out by President Hoover burned the hovels of the bonus camp on the Anacostia flats, lies in a charity hospital, its life hanging by a slender thread.

Another baby of two frightful and agonizing months, lies in a tiny coffin by the grace of a kind-hearted undertaker. The parents were burned out of their miserable camping place by the troops of the regular army, with which the father formerly served.

BABY BORN ON MARCH

When the bonus army began forming for the march on Washington John Myers and his wife were at their home in Ephrata, Pa. He had long been out of work. They set out together on foot. In Maryland Mrs. Myers had a baby.

They set out again. Two weeks ago they trudged wearily into the bonus camp, their worldly capital 20 cents.

They made a rude shack and settled down. The father begged the price of medicine for his sick baby.

On Thursday night when the camp was surrounded by the troops and the shacks fired, Mrs. Myers, with her infant at her breast, fled. A gas bomb, thrown by an infantryman, fell at her feet and exploded. The mother and the sick baby were enveloped in the fumes.

The baby was sent to Gallinger Hospital. Dr. J. A. Kelk, the assistant superintendent, is quoted as saying the infant had been on the way to recovery when it was gassed.

MONESSEN CHILD DIES

When the bonus army began its march, Cecil Mann, World War veteran, was living at his home in Monessen, near Pittsburgh. He had been out of work for months.

Destitute, and hoping that the government would pay him the bonus it had promised, he put his wife, Gertrude, and their four children, aged 9, 8, 5 and 3 years, into the old car and started for Washington.

On the way a baby was born. Five little mouths for this bewildered husband and wife to feed, besides their own.

They went to the bonus army camp.

The baby became ill. On Wednesday—the day before the troops were called out to burn the shacks—the baby was mercifully removed from the camp to Gallinger Hospital. There, Sunday night, it died.

Grandmother Mourns Bonus Baby's Death

Mrs. Gertrude O'Connor, 952 Graham avenue, Monessen, today mourned the death of her granddaughter in Washington. The seven-week-old baby's father is a bonus marcher, expelled from the capital last week.

Mrs. O'Connor, daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Mann, mother of the baby, telegraphed her last week:

"Don't worry, everything is all right, and all are well."

Born at Mrs. O'Connor's home, June 8, the baby had been named after her grandmother and mother. She died in a Washington hospital Sunday from the effects of hardship and lack of proper food. Malnutrition and stomach disorder were given as the cause of death. The Manns and their five children lived in the Anacostia camp of the B. E. F. since the infant was two weeks old. The baby was taken to the hospital a day before the camp was burned. The other children are Kerin, 10; Louise, 8; Cecil, Jr., 5, and Margaret, 3.

Foreign Engineers On Inspection Here

Pittsburgh's sanitary and water systems were to be inspected today by three sanitary engineers from Greece and Hungary, touring the country under the direction of the Rockefeller Foundation. The men are E. C. Boyazis and C. L. Floras, of Greece, and Julius Szilazyi, of Hungary.

They arrived in the city yesterday and will stay here four days. They also will visit the Mellon Institute and the United States Bureau of Mines station.

operate with the marshal and aid in recovering any stolen property.

Waite when served with the warrant said:

"You or any other government official can come into my camp any time and search the grounds, if you have the proper authority. If there are any tents belonging to the District of Columbia, I don't know about it."

The search warrant, said to have been granted under the provision of the prohibition act, was said by camp officers to be illegal, the location of the encampment being set forth as "Westmoreland County, near Ligonier." The bonus camp is in Somerset County.

The move on the part of the government was not a surprise to the marchers. Rumors early today indicated that the federal men planned to arrest Doak Carter, of Cleveland, acting commander and as early as 6 a. m., most of the 3,000 veterans were awake, prepared to defend their leader against removal. Carter was not in sight when Waite was served with a summons. R. E. Ellison, second in command to Carter, reported that he was unable to locate him.

The morale of the tattered army was raised today as some degree of order emerged out of the chaos at the camp here.

With a demonstration by Communists stifled almost before it started last night, the bonus army today was put on a schedule of three meals a day, as money and food began arriving.

PLAN NEW CAMP

Plans were being made to erect Camp Pleasant, at Laurel, Md., despite the threat of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie to keep the army out of that state.

Chief of Staff Carter said carpenters and mechanics will leave in a few days to prepare the camp.

Walter W. Waters, commander-in-chief, is expected to fly here to allay anxiety caused by the announcement of Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland, that the veterans will not be permitted in Maryland.

Carter announced that the first caravan of "Khaki Shirts," a semi-military political organization, would start possibly late today for a tour of the nation. Twenty-five truckloads of leaders hope to make the tour in efforts to mold opinion for activity in future elections.

Two more offers of permanent camp sites were received. Alfred J. Snyder, Philadelphia lawyer and ex-service man, tendered a tract of 2,000 acres near Tuckahoe, N. J.

The heavy influx of mail brought much sympathy, a few checks and money orders, and small donations in cash. A chain letter calling for a dime contribution was started by an anonymous friend.

JOHNSTOWN RIOT

Rioting, of a mild sort, broke out in the streets of Johnstown last night. Five men were arrested, four on charges of disorderly conduct and another on charges of inciting to riot.

Mayor McCloskey, returning from a hurried conference with Gov. Pinchot in Harrisburg, arrived in time to take an active part in the disorder. The prize-fighting Mayor rushed into the melee, grabbed two prisoners from his own police and turned them over to bonus veterans, who delivered them to the city lockup.

At the city jail they were docketed as George Hart, secretary of the International Metal Workers of America, and Frank Garlako, 71, of Johnstown. Hart, a Communist, declared he was carrying out instructions from Moscow as part of an international demonstration against war.

Garlako said he did not understand a policeman's order to move on when the trouble started.

DEFIED M'CLOSKEY

Hart had previously announced he would hold the demonstration regardless of a protest of Mayor McCloskey.

The crowd cheered the veterans for the way they handled the prisoners.

Later three others were brought in on disorderly conduct charges.

Mayor McCloskey and Dr. Charles I. Shaffer, health commissioner of Somerset County, returned from Harrisburg where they conferred with Gov. Pinchot late yesterday. The Governor, Mayor McCloskey said, promised consideration and tolerance for the veterans and when the time comes for transportation, the Mayor said, the "Governor of Pennsylvania will be right out front."

PROMISED NOTHING

McCloskey said:

"We were with the Governor for three-quarters of an hour and while he promised nothing definitely, he didn't say no to anything.

"He can't supply us with tents, so it is up to the people to find some kind of shelter for these poor refugees who are here in Johnstown as my guests. Hasn't anyone got a big circus tent? We'll appreciate it if it can be lent."

KIN OF AL SMITH HELD IN KILLING

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Deputy Sheriff Vincent Glynn, a nephew of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, was arrested on a charge of homicide today after shooting and killing Walter Edward Webel, Jr., for whom he had a warrant charging contempt of court.

Glynn killed Webel after he said Webel struck him and fled in an effort to escape service of a contempt of court warrant.

Webel and Inez Murray, both residents of Brooklyn, were married when minors, and the girl's parents succeeded in having the marriage annulled. A child was born, and Webel was ordered by the court to pay $10 a week toward its support. Having fallen far in arrears, a warrant was issued for his arrest on a charge of contempt, and Glynn was given the warrant to serve.

Glynn said he went to the home of Webel's parents today, waited until Webel came out, and then told him he had a warrant for his arrest. Webel, he said, struck him and then started to run.

MILITARY RITES FOR VET SLAIN IN RIOTING

Witness at Inquest Says One Man Drew Gun

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—A military funeral in Arlington National Cemetery was held today for William Hushka, a Chicago bonus-seeking war veteran, a few hours after a second former serviceman died from wounds received in last week's rioting.

Hushka was shot by George Shinault, a policeman.

His body was escorted to the grave by representatives of veterans' organizations in the capital.

His body was lowered into the grave as a squad from the 3rd Cavalry at Fort Myer—one of the units in last week's movement that routed the bonus army—fired three volleys, and a khaki-clad bugler sounded "taps."

Fully 2,000 persons were present. Walter W. Waters, commander of the routed B. E. F., stood near the grave.

Eric Carlson, 38, of Oakland, Cal., was the second to die from a bullet wound received in clashes with police which culminated in the calling out of federal troops by President Hoover to restore order. Police said the shot was fired by Miles Znamenacek, an officer, while he was being roughly handled.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury assembled to investigate the two deaths.

At the inquest Stephen A. Armstrong, of Washington, testified he saw a bonus marcher draw and point a revolver toward policemen during the riot on Pennsylvania avenue last Thursday. He said he heard four shots fired before he saw Znamenacek draw his revolver.

COMPOSER WON WIFE IN RADIO ROMANCE

Armless Singer, Air Pioneer Passes Alone And Destitute

A successful writer of popular songs, despite the loss of both arms, "Tommy" Malie, a former Pittsburgher, died in Chicago, in poverty, friends here related today.

Malie, these Pittsburghers said, flashed across the musical horizon, accumulated and squandered a fortune in his last days, lost his wife whom he had won in what was said to have been the first radio romance on record.

BROTHER IN DONORA

News of Malie's death was received in Pittsburgh by Joe Hiller, former manager of Show Boat, and asking the whereabouts of relatives. A brother, his only relative in this vicinity, is Andrew Malie, of 741 Heslip avenue, Donora, who learned of the death over radio station WCAE.

Malie will be buried at the expense of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, Gene Buck, president, said.

An Associated Press dispatch from Chicago said:

"A coroner's jury returned a verdict of natural death from bronchial pneumonia and chronic nephritis. Physicians said the latter betrayed the part continual drinking played in his last years. His friends told of many vain attempts to help him give it up."

Malie's romance blossomed during the introduction of his song hit "Jealous" over a Pittsburgh radio station. A girl in New York heard the plaintive tune, wrote its author, and in three weeks, according to Pittsburgh friends, Malie and the girl marched to the altar.

LOST BOTH ARMS

He lost his arms beneath the wheels of a railroad train when he was 2 years old.

Malie left Pittsburgh about 10 years ago. For several years he was a conspicuous figure in music circles here, being connected with Hiller's song shop. He was the author of "Jealous," "Because They All Love You," and "I'm Looking at the World Through Rose Colored Glasses."

He was a partner in the radio team of Tommy Malie and Jack Little, one of the first on the air. He was 38 years old.

BUTLER PLEADS FOR VETERANS

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired, said today some authority should take command of the situation of the bonus marchers at Johnstown with the view of getting the men, women and children gathered there to their home states without further humiliation. Butler said:

"I will do anything on the face of the globe for these people. They should be cared for without reference to the soldiers' bonus cause. Get them home, and then the cause of the soldiers can be taken up later.

"The situation at Johnstown is complicated by the presence of hundreds of women and children. Death will come to many of them because of improper care if the situation is not promptly met."

RITCHIE, BONUS CHIEF TO MEET

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Following his disapproval of the Bonus Expeditionary Force establishing a permanent colony near Waterbury, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie consented to confer today with Walter W. Waters, the veterans' leader.

Pointing out the distress and necessary relief work among the resident of the state and the disadvantages of the proposed colony site to support the veterans, the Governor said in his statement, 'under these conditions the settlement is totally impracticable and and should not be established."

William Preston Lane, Attorney General of Maryland, he added, was considering legal means of preventing the bonus-seekers from entering the state.

The Governor's statement brought a retort from Mrs. Maude Edgell, who sold the 25-acre tract to Waters for a dollar, that she was "bitterly disappointed" with his announcement.

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Eric Carlson, 38-year-old Oakland member of the Bonus Expeditionary Force, who died of wounds in Washington today enlisted in the army at Rockford, Ill., two weeks after war was declared.

He served 18 months overseas with headquarters company of the 86th Field Artillery in the 3rd Division, A. E. F. He was gassed, suffered a neuro-psychiatric disability and once reported missing at the front.

Carlson joined Lake Shore Post, Chicago, of the American Legion, and later came to California.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—J. Thomas Richardson, undertaker, today related that four $1,000 bills dropped to the floor when he removed the shoes from the body of Nickola Kuzmich, 43, of Pittsburgh, killed in an automobile accident Sunday.

The bills, with an additional $122 found in the victim's pockets, constituted his saving toward his contemplated return to Croatia. Richardson said he would arrange to send the money to the man's relatives in that country.

Judge Builds Nursery For Babies in Court

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—It will be a pleasure for infants of evicted families to appear with their parents in Judge Edward B. Casey's renters' court.

The judge converted his court chambers in City Hall into a nursery yesterday and installed his wife, Ruth, as its head, announcing she would give the children free milk donated by a milk association.

Marrying 'Squire' Will Wed 'Perfect Woman'

EVANSTON, Ill., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Romance has finally caught up with Evanston's 79-year-old justice of the peace, who has performed nearly 1,700 marriages.

He announced last night he was going to marry a red-haired woman next Saturday.

The bride-to-be is Mrs. Emmy Christensen, 41, who apparently meets all the requirements of a "perfect woman," as described by the justice some months ago when he held public bids for a wife, asserting that none except red-heads need apply.

He received more than 250 responses from women, but accepted none.

Justice Samuel Harrison is a widower and a great-grandfather. His bride-to-be is a grandmother. He was reluctant to discuss his approaching marriage fully, but said he would follow the precepts he has given to newlyweds for many years. They include:

"Treat your wife as a mate, not as an idol."

"Woman's place is in the home, and her husband's place is beside her."

Some of the judge's children are reported to be opposed to his marriage, but the justice said he would marry Mrs Christensen Saturday, even if he has to elope.

WOUNDED BOY NOW ROBBERY SUSPECT

Howard Frick, 26, of Versailles, identified, police say, by Roy Mellinger, 19, of Vermont avenue, Versailles, as the man who shot him as he returned home from a dance, was at liberty today and Mellinger was held under police guard in the McKeesport Hospital. Police and county officials are investigating the allegation of a real estate dealer that Mellinger was wounded in a holdup in the Coulterville road Thursday night.

Frick was placed in jail on a felony charge after he was identified at the hospital by Mellinger, but was later released.

Investigating a report of William Weldon, the real estate dealer, that he shot a man during a holdup in the Coulterville road Thursday night, police took him and Ivy Woodward, of 804 Summit street, McKeesport, to the hospital, where they are said to have identified Mellinger as the leader of the bandit group.

Two youths, Wilbert Gobdel, 20, of O'Neil boulevard, Versailles, and William Egenlauf, 19, of 507 Bennett street, McKeesport, said by detectives to have been named by Mellinger as members of the gang, were arrested and held in the McKeesport Police Station.

HALL SITE FEE BOARD BLOCKED

Alderman John J. Verona and the Schenley Farms Corporation, of which F. F. Nicola is the head, couldn't agree on arbiters on the Verona claim of $150,000 commission in the sale of the Oakland town hall site to the county.

Six names submitted by Verona's counsel were turned down by the opposition and likewise a list of six by the Schenley Farms Corporation was turned down by Verona. The conference was in the office of Prothonotary John Vogt.

Verona named Jacob Kalson, John Fugassi, J. O'Neil, John C. McGovern, W. C. Rice and Robert M. McWade. The corporation submitted names of E. B. Hunting, J. F. Keenan, C. L. McKenzie, Marcus Aaron, Edgar J. Kaufmann and Bert Beymer.

This afternoon Prothonotary Vogt will submit a list of 15 names and each side will be asked to cut out one, until only three names are left. They will be the arbiters.

Meanwhile in chambers, Judge Thomas M. Marshall granted the Schenley Farms Corporation an alternative writ of mandamus directing the County Commissioners, Treasurer and Controller, to pay the Nicola interests $1,104,360 for the Town Hall site in Oakland. The writ was made returnable August 22.

BLAST DEATHS MOUNT TO 7

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The death list had grown to seven today as officials strove to determine the cause of a double explosion that turned the sub-cellar of the Ritz Tower, Park avenue skyscraper hotel, into a narrow-chambered inferno.

Two more firemen—torn, burned and poisoned by fumes—died last night after five of their fellows had died earlier. Several others of the 25 hurt were in a critical condition.

A rush of air hitting pent-up paint vapors was one explanation advanced for the blasts. Summoned to fight a small blaze in a paint shop in the cellar yesterday, the firemen descended and were trapped.

The Ritz Tower, 41 stories high, has been the scene of dinners to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and other celebrities.

FLINN HIGHWAY JOB URGED ON PINCHOT

Improvement of Primary route No. 8, Pittsburgh to Butler, is asked in a petition to be sent to Gov. Pinchot and Secretary of Highways Samuel S. Lewis by the William Flinn Highway Association. A 30-foot highway is sought.

The improvement would be financied by federal relief funds allocated to Pennsylvania for road building.

Joining in the petition also were Senator David A. Reed, James J. Davis, County Commissioners Charles C. McGovern, C. M. Barr and William D. Mansfield, Mayor Joseph Heineman, of Butler, and the Butler County Commissioners.

Others seeking the improvement are Senator Frank J. Harris, Joseph C. Trees and Mrs. Mary Flinn Lawrence, who have personally urged Gov. Pinchot to designate the highway for improvement.

GIRL BELIEVED ABDUCTED

LUDINGTON, Mich., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—A few blond hairs caught on a twig and marks of a struggle between a girl and at least one man in a swamp offered the only apparent clue today to the disappearance of 17-year-old Evalyn Sanford Saturday night.

State police said they were convinced the pretty farm girl was abducted as she walked along a road through the swamp from Freesoil to her home, half a mile out.

George Beuge, a neighbor, said he heard a girl's screams as he walked along the same highway about 10 o'clock Saturday night. The police said Evalyn had only one boy friend and he was fishing with his father the night of the disappearance.

Pools within the swamp have been dragged without success and the belief is that the girl was taken away in an automobile.

Dance Fans Fined After Row at Marathon

The complaint of three men who were arraigned in East End Police Court today seemed to be that when they go to a marathon dance they expect to see dancing. Police testified the three insulted the contestants in the Motor Square Garden marathon and even demanded their money back, contending the dancers didn't dance.

One of them, William McCullough, 32, of Natchez street, even swung a haymaker on Patrolman Michael Cahill, police testified. He was fined $25. The other two, Elmer Kestner, 26, of Climax street, and Edward F. Horne, of Charles street, were assessed $10.

The most seriously injured is Mrs. Thomas Neill, who was at Heaton Hospital suffering from cuts and shock, which it was feared would prove serious because of her advanced age.

Mrs. Cleo Canapazzi, of Barre, is in Barre City Hospital with facial cuts.

Social activites for the summer are usually a potpourri of this, that and the other, mostly informal, and it's a grand time to make plans for the fall. The charitable organizations in which society women are interested, usually have their opening meetings in October and September. The board of managers of the Eye and Ear Hospital will hold its first meeting on Thursday, September 15, at the hospital, and among other business will discuss the date for the annual card party.

Mrs. William C. Scott, you know, is president of the board, and her vice presidents are Mrs. Howard Hale McClintic, Mrs. Edward B. Scull and Miss Anne Robinson.

Wheaton Club Sponsors Lectures by Kenyon, Tech Drama Head

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The Wheaton Club of Pittsburgh, an infant in the club world, is planning its first big step into prominence. It will sponsor a series of six lectures by Elmer Kenyon, head of Carnegie Tech's Drama School, the lectures to be given weekly at the College Club in the early fall, probably October and November. The entire course is to be on "Modern Dramatists" and the proceeds will be used to furnish the Wheaton room in the new College Club.

One of the most original programs outlined for next year by the Swissvale Woman's Club is that for January 12, which is designated as a "quiz program." On that day five papers will be given that will answer questions on why Pennsylvania is called the "Keystone State;" who were the how cocoanuts are used to help United States warships; what influence upon the public and the home the modern newspaper has, and what motion pictures have been a good influence on American life.

Another unusual feature of the season will be a Valentine edition of the club magazine, which will have various departments. A musicale by visiting artists, Charlotte Shallenberger, Margaret Estep, Edward Dunbar and James Achtzehn, and a playlet by the members will be other spring events.

Musicale Planned

There will, of course, be the customary June luncheon to close the year, while in the early season will come the president's day (September 12) which is also to be a guest day, and later devoted to citizenship with the program in charge of the civic committee. The Thanksgiving program will be a "Thanksgiving menu" in the form of papers. Christmas carols and other music will be offered at the Christmas party, taking place on December 12, and completing the old year's events. Mrs. Hugh K. McJunkin is still president of the club.

Plans for the annual convention of Pennsylvania Council, American Legion Auxiliary, will be completed tomorrow at the monthly meeting of Allegheny County Council in the Congress of Clubs. The convention is scheduled to take place here August 18 to 20.

Club Notes

A capacity crowd is attending the benefit boat excursion of the Margaret A. Caven Layette Club aboard the Washington today. The result will be that the club's funds, lost in a bank crash, will be recreated and its splendid work will be carried on. For 14 years, the organization has had but one aim, that of presenting layettes to babies aged up to six months whose mothers could not afford clothing for the new members of the family. Incidentally, every case is carefully investigated, so that there is never any question as to its worthiness. Last year 666 layettes were distributed.

Mrs. W. A. Caven

The club was formed as a tribute to Mrs. W. A. Caven when she was supreme worthy high priestess (the national head) of the White Shrine of Jerusalem and has members throughout the United States and Canada. Mrs. Caven has been president ever since its formation. Its Pittsburgh membership numbers about 150.

Crafton Girl Wed

Miss Mary Gertrude Smith, daughter of Mrs. R. Leard Smith and the late Rev. Smith, became the bride of Dr. S. Allen Dingee on Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church of Crafton. Officiating was the Rev. Dr. Alfred S. Dingee, father of the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. George Atwell. The altar was decorated with palms and ferns.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Stanley W. Smith, wore ivory satin and a veil of tulle finished with a cap of rose point lace and seed pearls. She carried calla lilies.

Her sister, Miss Helen B. Smith, as maid of honor, wore embroidered organdie over pink taffeta, made with bouffant skirt puffed, short sleeves. Her hat was of pink horsehaid braid, and her bouquet of roses and blue delphinium. Miss Eleanor Dingee, of Philadelphia, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Helen Vance were bridesmaids. They wore pale green organdie frocks with matching hats and carried Johanna Hill roses and delphinium.

Green Frocks

Another sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Arthur Whitaker, played the wedding music. Dr. Carl Fischer, of Philadelphia, was best man and ushers included Clifford Collier and Robert Leard Smith, Jr., brother of the bride.

After a reception and buffet supper in the Chartiers Heights Country Club, Dr. and Mrs. Dingee left for New England.

A THREE-PIECE COSTUME WITH UNUSUAL FEATURES FOR CHIC

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—Paris never tires of looking for new ways to make dresses look like coats, coats look like jackets and jackets and skirts like one-piece dresses. It is a sort of a fashion game which never seems to have an end. Yet it has its purpose—the feat of making a single costume do for practically any hour of the day.

THERE IS, for example, Molyneux's georgette suit. It is, as the sketch shows, a three-piece costume, yet it looks very much like a combination of a dress with three-quarter-length coat. With its jacket fastened it becomes an all-black costume, in good taste for the street at any hour of the day. Yet its white blouse portions dress it up sufficiently for a luncheon or for afternoon bridge. Of georgette crepe, it is cool enough for the hottest day. The double thicknesses in it will do away with the necessity of heavy slips.

THE DRESS itself is composed of separate skirt and three-quarter-length jumper blouse which, incidentally, may be put on or taken off with the minimum of effort, since it buttons all the way down the front. All the skirt fullness is concentrated in a few plaits at the center-back, so that a long, straight silhouette is maintained.

THE JACKET is sleeveless, but has a deep gored shoulder-cape which covers the upper arms. Its collar is a soft rolled tube which holds a scarf that may be worn loose or tied in a bow. A scarf sash, tying at the center-front, begins at the side-seams, under the arms, and pulls the otherwise straight back into gathers which outline the curves at the back of the waist.

RAILWAY RATES PERIL RIVER TRAFFIC

Development of Pittsburgh's waterway transportation today is threatened unless some organization or a new group of business interests is formed to promote a five-year expansion program, according to William L. McKinney, president of the Elsey River Transportation Line, of Pittsburgh.

Lowered railroad rates on routes paralleling rivers threaten to retard waterway shipments, McKinney warned. He cited a railroad case today pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission. He said:

"The railroad seeks a new tariff that will bring its rate within 4 mills of the water transportation cost for certain commodities. The case affects shipments between New Orleans, Memphis and Louisville. While the rail rate today is 30 cents a hundredweight, they seek to drop it to within 4 mills of water shipment cost. Continuous spreading of this competition will endanger waterway business throughout the country."

He declared a definite expansion program was the only solution.

FIVE aces may not be according to Hoyle, but they provide unbeatable values for August fur buyers. They involve five substantial furs for which we are recognized leaders, and we have chosen the August Sale as a time to emphasize their leadership in unmistakable fashion.

The new coats are longer, with straighter line bodies. The chief interest is above the waist, with new collars and raised sleeve fullness. There are complete sizes from 12 to 44, with specialization for the junior-miss and small woman (half sizes) who are neglected on most occasions of this sort.

The careful selection which goes into all Horne furs is emphasized in every one of these August specials. There is nothing we can say of our regular stocks that we cannot say of these August values except that these are substantially lower in price. Our own concessions alone would make a worth while sale, but August buyers also enjoy the benefit of the special discounts which our regular manufacturers allow as an incentive to early fur buying.

The ceremony was performed by Bishop Benjamin Brewster, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Maine, in the presence of the immediate families and relatives.

Dr. Angell's first wife died more than a year ago.

RAIL MEN MEET WITH R. F. C.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—A group of railway executives met with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation today, but declined to discuss the purpose of the conference.

Among those present were Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio; W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and R. H. Aishton, manager of the Railway Executives' Association.

CHANGE OF FRONT

The program represented a complete change of front by the Senate and is based on a desire to wash up the Ainey case and as far as possible submerge it as a political issue in the state and national campaigns.

The investigating committee named last night, comprised the same membership which has conducted the preliminary inquiry. It consists of Senators Rial, Westmoreland, chairman; Coyne, Allegheny; Salus, Buckman, Clippinger, Roberts and Earnest. The appropriation of $150,000 for the inquiry is tied up in the Steedle appropriation bill, resting in conference.

PINCHOT IGNORED

The resolution last night was carefully worded to eliminate reference to the Governor, who instituted the charges against Ainey. It recited that the committee had heard charges of misconduct in office, and believed them sufficiently serious to warrant the immediate defense by Ainey. Stress was laid on the charge, first made by Pinchot, that Ainey's hospital bills of more than $3,000 at a Baltimore hospital had been paid by the late Arthur W. Thompson, then president of the Philadelphia Company, holding organization of Pittsburgh utilities.

There was, however, no reference in the resolution to the fact that Pinchot had uncovered this evidence and had presented the committee with photostatic copies of hospital records purporting to show receipt of checks drawn from Thompson, together with a notation on the top of Ainey's bills that they were to be sent to Thompson at the Philadelphia Company offices, 435 Sixth avenue, Pittsburgh.

P. S. C. CONTROL

Dismissal of Ainey would give the Governor almost immediate control of the Public Service Commission. He will not have to wait until October 1, the date when the resignation of Commissioner Emerson Collins becomes effective.

Collins under charges of inefficiency and neglect of duty, lodged by the Governor, presented his resignation yesterday, effective October 1. This date was fixed in conferences between representatives of the Collins family and the Governor. Collins has been ill for more than two years and has been unable to fulfill the duties of his office.

Decision of the Senate last night to act expediously without waiting for the Governor's hearing of Ainey, was directed by Republican State Chairman Edward Martin in a conference with Senate leaders. Martin is understood to have consulted with W. L. Mellon on the subject.

CROONER'S HIGH PAY REVEALED

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Crooning, as Bing Crosby does it, is nothing short of big business, a suit against the radio singer disclosed here.

Grace Dobish, acting as assignee for Edward Small Company, theatrical agents, asked $105,000 from Crosby, declaring that between June 26, 1930, and June 26, 1932, Crosby made $250,000 and is working under a contract which will pay him $800000.

The action said the agents obtained the $250,000 contract, but Crosby failed to pay the customary 10 per cent, for which the plaintiff asked $25,000. For alleged wrongful dismissal of the agent she asked another $80,000.

FUNERAL HERE FOR STEEL MAN

The body of William Wallace Barber, 44, superintendent of the Republic Steel Company plant at Youngstown, O., who died yesterday in Nashville, N. C., will arrive in Pittsburgh tonight, members of the family said today. Mr. Barber was born in Pittsburgh and entered the steel business with the Carnegie Steel Company, remaining with that company until six years ago, when he became mill superintendent of the Youngstown plant of the Republic company. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Youngstown, and Pittsburgh Lodge No. 484, F. & A. M.; the Consistory and the Shrine.

Besides his sisters he leaves his widow, four daughters, Mary Elizabeth, Louise Miller, Anna Mae and Christine Jane Barber, and two brothers, George and John Barber, of New York.

ERLANGER WIFE WINS STATUS

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—Charlotte M. Fixel, former actress, was recognized as the common law widow of A. L. Erlanger, theater magnate, in an opinion handed down yesterday by Surrogate John P. O'Brien, who sat in a 10-week trial of her action.

As common law widow, Miss Fixel thus wins the right to contest Erlanger's will, which divided the showman's estate largely among ex-Supreme Court Justice Mitchell L. Erlanger, his brother, and his sisters, Mrs. Charlotte Bergman and the late Miss Ray Erlanger.

Max D. Steuer, counsel for Miss Fixel, had estimated the estate at nearly $75,000,000, but an accounting filed May 4 by Saul J. Baron, temporary administrator, set assets at $124.50 cash and $1,270,000 in "uncollected or uncollectable" debts.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 2.—(INS.)—A medal for bravery is to be sought for Myra V. Stolzenvoss, the dog heroine who recently was bitten by a rattlesnake which threatened the life of her 3-year-old master, Gene Boldman.

While Myra V was being taken home from the dog hospital, completely recovered, affidavits were sent to the American Humane Association at New York, attesting her bravery and requesting an award.

Myra leaped at the snake when it coiled to strike the boy. She quickly killed it, but was bitten in the attempt.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Only Game Contract

Bizarre and unusual results occur frequently at the contract table through unusual opening bids designed to deceive the opponents, and based upon the proposition that the partner can later be undeceived.

Recently there was played in New York City a match between Mr. Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Harry B. Raffel against Louis H. Watson and Edward Hymes, Jr. Mr. Hymes is a brilliant young player, whose outstanding characteristic in the bidding is an effort, somewhere before the contracting is ended, to make a bid that would not occur to another.

North—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠AKQJ ♡AK84 ◇1065 ♣96
♠985 ♡10763 ◇K ♣Q1074 3	North West East South	♠762 ♡92 ◇AQJ74 ♣AJ8
	♠1043 ♡QJ5 ◇9832 ♣K52

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
		1♣	Pass (1)
1NT (2)	Pass	2♣	Pass
2NT (3)	Pass	3NT (4)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) A bid of one diamond here, rather than the strategic pass, would have brought about an entirely different result.

(2) Keeping the bidding open.

(3) A minimum response.

(4) Deciding to conceal the second biddable suit. The hand apparently, in view of partner's minimum bidding, cannot produce game at hearts or spades, and yet, even with as little as 1 honor-trick, favorable distribution may well produce a lay-down game at notrump.

West studied long over his choice of an opening lead, but eventually decided upon the lead of the fourth best heart. He knew the psychic propensities of Mr. Hymes, who sat North, and had considered the possibilities of a club opening or the gambling lead of the singleton diamond king. With the heart lead, Mr. Watson could see that his contract depended entirely upon the location of the club Ace, provided he could cash it before the opponents learned the diamond situation. He, therefore, won the first trick with the Ace of hearts in Dummy, and immediately led a small club, his clew to the play being that East had studied somewhat before passing the opening club bid. East did not go up with the Ace, Mr. Watson played the king, and when it held, immediately cashed seven more tricks in hearts and spades, conceding the last four tricks to his opponents.

While the unconventional opening bid was a factor in this result, the major cause of the unfortunate outcome for East and West was East's failure to overcall on the first round of bidding. His later explanation was that he feared a major suit game and hoped, by concealing the diamond strength, that his opponents might reach a game contract in no-trump, against which he felt he could defend.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Mrs. Culbertson will be glad to answer any specific question on bidding or play sent in by readers. Address her in care of this newspaper, inclosing a three-cent stamped self-addressed envelope.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Is it unethical and unsportsmanlike to overbid in order to prevent opponents from making a game?

Answer—No. The primary idea in bridge is to score more points than your opponents. Consequently, any bid which increases one's own score or decreases opponents' score is good bridge and is perfectly ethical.

Rodriguez Succeeds To Post of Calles

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Gen. Abelardo Rodriguez was named secretary of war yesterday to succeed Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, who resigned from the post last week for personal reasons.

LEGION OPENS BOTTLE DRIVE

Today local unemployed Legionnaires are going into the bottle collection business. They are seeking approximately a half million ginger ale bottles, hidden away in the Pittsburgh homes, and for each one they bring to light they will be paid 2 cents for a little fellow and 5 cents for a big one.

"Bob" Cochrane, vice commander of the Allegheny County American Legion, has asked Pittsburgh householders to aid the Legionnaires in the collection. He said:

"All we are asking the people of our city is to telephone Legion headquarters, Atlantic 9730, that they have some empty ginger ale bottles and we'll do the rest."

Customers Pay Bills By Building Store

JOLIET, Ill., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Approximately 100 customers of John and Anton Grohar, brothers operating a grocery store, have just about finished paying their bills by building a new buildings for them.

Should Husband Be Forgiven For Making a Mis-Step?

"Throw Him Out!"

That was Kitty's answer, when Edith Ayers asked whether she should forgive the husband who had confessed that he was the father of another woman's child, and take that child to raise as her own, as he had asked her to do.

"She should have knocked him on the head when he first put it up to her," Kitty went on, warming to her subject. "That little wife's life is ruined! She'll never get over this dreadful blow—at least not as long as she keeps him around to remind her of it! And I know what I am talking about. I once had exactly that same tragedy to live through myself!"

Perhaps you agreed with her.

Perhaps you believe now that no woman could ever forgive a man for such a mis-step, or be happy with him again.

SAME EXPERIENCE

She, too, had the shock and pain of having her deeply-loved husband come to her with the same confession and the same plea.

My Dear Sally—

I have read the letter from Edith Ayers, and my heart goes out to her in deepest sympathy in her trouble. I know just how crushed and heart-broken she feels, because I, too, had to face the same thing.

Only I think I was more to blame than Edith. I did not want to have children, and had refused to have any.

So my husband, who loved them, found someone else, though all the while he loved me. Finally, he came to me, told me about it, and asked what I was going to do.

I didn't know what to do. I was just like Edith. Bewildered. Hurt. But finally I went to him, and told him to bring the girl to me at our home, and let me talk to her. He did, and I found that he was the only man in her life.

ADOPT BABY

Well, here's what I did. I kept her till her baby was born, and then she stayed with me until she was strong enough to get a job. And we adopted the baby, a fine little boy—and by the way, he is the picture of his father.

My husband wanted me to move away to a new town, where no one could know or gossip about us; but I said "No, we'll stay right here, and I will help you fight it out." So we did. And in spite of my hurt at what he had done, I found I could forgive him and love him still. I have a child of my own now, and the girl is married, and we are the best of friends.

I think that I did the right thing when I decided that I would go on, and not destroy our marriage. My husband is really a wonderful man. I never throw the past up to him, or allow the memory of it to come between us. I appreciate his having the honesty and grit to come out and tell me what had happened. I think it takes a man with the right stuff in him to do a thing like that. I realize it was not easy.

I am telling you all this because I want Edith to know that it isn't necessary to destroy all that her marriage has meant, just because her husband had a weak moment; or feel that she cannot trust him any more because of that moment, which he probably bitterly regrets.

AN EXCELLENT HUSBAND

My husband has told me a great many times that he loved me more deeply than he ever had before, because of my understanding and forgiveness. He is marvelously good to me. I am sure that, because I do trust him, even after his mis-step, he will never make another. I am sure that all his life he will live up to my faith in him.

I hope Edith will go on, as I did, and I wish her luck and happiness. Some women might not be able to forgive, but I think that she can, because of the very fact that she was in doubt about what she would do. A woman who couldn't forgive would have packed up and left, without any hesitation or parleying. And I am sure that forgiveness is best. After all, probably she made mistakes, too, that might have influenced her husband. I know that the thing mine did was my fault.

—MARGARET.

To me, that seems one of the noblest stories I have ever read—a story that makes all human life seem a braver adventure.

How does it seem to you?

SHE MISSES HER OWN MONEY TO SPEND AS SHE WISHES
DO YOU THINK YOU'LL BE HAPPY IN HIS SET?
SHE FINDS SHE IS UNHAPPY AWAY FROM HER OWN WORLD
FAY KING

By FAY KING

When a beautiful girl of the stage has the opportunity to marry a man of riches and social position one hardly knows whether to advise her to do so or not.

It seems to me that all the wealth and distinction are not worth the misery such a marriage is apt to bring to her.

Society and the stage are such worlds apart. Each can be very wonderful if you rightly belong to it. But rarely does anyone from either of these different spheres become happily adjusted to the other.

Society girls are usually a flop and a bore in show business. Stage girls seem to droop and fade away from the stimulation and spontaneity of the stage.

Both are happier in their proper place.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Dinner.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My cousin is to be married next week and they are having dinner served in her home. We received an invitation to the church and to dinner. My aunt asked my young sister to help serve dinner. I think that was wrong. I think that is an insult. Mother thinks that it is all right. Please tell me who is right?

2. If we go to church, would it be all right if we don't go to dinner in the evening as we have another engagement for the same evening? READER.

1. I agree with your mother about the spirit in which this invitation probably was given. I am sure that your aunt probably thought it would be charming to have the party surfounded by devoted relatives who would enjoy giving this service, and who would do it graciously and devotedly.

2. Another engagement is usually sufficient reason for not attending a party of any kind, but it does seem rather inconsistent not to go to the dinner after the wedding of a cousin.

Lemon and Tea

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When lemon is served with tea, cut and placed over the edge of the tea glass, it should be removed and placed in the glass of tea and the juice then squeezed out by pressing it against the side of the glass with the tea spoon?

2. When a man, slightly acquainted with a young lady, has asked her to dance, is it incorrect for her to thank him after the dance, if she accepts? J.

1. Yes, if the lemon is served in this way, this is the thing we do to get the juice from the lemon . . . take the lemon from the side, place it in the glass of tea, and then squeeze the juice from it by pressing it against the bottom of the glass (not the side of the glass) with the iced tea spoon.

2. The young lady doesn't exactly thank the man for the dance—he thanks her, and, in response, she graciously says something that shows that she, too, enjoyed the dance. Just that, if she wishes, "I thoroughly enjoyed that dance, Bob," or "That was delightful, Mr. Morris."

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Nothing new about the coiffure revealing the full expanse of the feminine brow. In the time of Louis XI, which is far far back on the calendar of the years, if you care to know, there was such a wild yen for forehead display that the vimmin pulled out their hair, plucked it so far back that the facial area continued on up to the crown of the head. The beauties of the middle ages were not brow-minded, they were brow crazy. And so the beauty world wags on. In our day we've had purple finger nails, weeded eyebrows, silver-gold locks, hard-boiled waves, lacquered hair, eye shadows. Nothing exciting about that list. We're not so frenzied after all.

Nobody has ever been able to prove that liver spots have anything to do with the liver, or visa versa. They belong to the freckle family and no doubt are due to nothing more than a change of the pigment of the skin. When they first appear they can be removed by means of a mild bleach. When they are established only a skin irritant will oust them.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Start This Season to Prevent Next Year's Hay Fever

In summer and autumn cases of hay fever are all too common, this annoying and distressing disease afflicting thousands of people. Progress has been made in the treatment and relief of hay fever, but unfortunately the number of sufferers far exceeds the number cured of the affliction.

Dr. Copeland

Hay fever attacks sometimes are promoted by a sensitivity to certain plants, but frequently the attacks are not unlike attacks of asthma. They are traced to a sensitivity to certain proteins that may be in the food, in the clothing or housefurnishings, or they may come from animals about the house.

Every factor in the sensitivity must be studied before a cure can be expected. The substance which causes the attack may be determined by certain skin tests.

Sufferers from hay fever complain of itching and congestion of the eyes when exposed to the offending pollens, which are produced by the common trees, grasses and ragweeds.

The afflicted person has violent attacks of sneezing; there is a thin and irritating discharge from the nose; the inside of the mouth itches, and there is a desire to rub the eyes. These symptoms are usually worse in the morning, and they vary in severity, depending upon the individual.

In some cases gratifying preventive results are obtained by the injection of vaccines made from a solution of the ragweed pollen. This treatment is only beneficial if the injections are given before the hay fever season begins. Many individuals are not benefited until the following summer, when the injections must be repeated, while others receive immediate and prolonged relief.

Recently a new method has been used in the prevention of this uncomfortable disease. It is the use of "pollen filters," fitted into the windows of the bedroom or other rooms frequented by the sufferer to prevent the admission of the irritating pollens. The results have been beneficial in some cases, but unfortunately these mechanical devices are expensive.

If you are a sufferer from hay fever, I would advise you to consult with your physician. Repeated injections of the proper vaccine may aid you during the hay fever season. Likewise it may protect you from subsequent colds and infections.

If your annual attack of hay fever is over, do not neglect attention to the causes, for by careful study of your case the doctor may put you in the way of escape next year. No one should settle down to the conviction that there is no hope of prevention.

You may have the consolation of knowing, too, that intensive studies are being made to master hay fever, asthma, hives and other ailments having apparently similar causes. Some day the mystery will be solved.

How Do You Choose Your Grocer?

On what basis do you select the man with whom you are going to deal for foods? It makes a big difference, you know. All grocers are not alike. Some have better values, some have better foods, some are able to please you generally.

It is on all counts that The Triangle Grocer is able to satisfy your needs. Not price alone, not quality alone—but general all-around satisfaction. Why? Simply because his position is naturally better to serve you. He can give you prices as good or better than large organizations for he buys in carload lots, just as they do. Not only that, but he is free from the staggering overhead of high-salaried executives and large office forces—that helps keep prices down.

His merchandising procedures are to your advantage. He takes a small profit from each item, rather than price one thing ridiculously low at the expense of another. His weights and measures are absolutely fair and correct—his manner is friendly and helpful—he and his help are fellow citizens, contributing to the welfare of our town.

Those are reasons why you should select your nearest Triangle Grocer to deal with regularly. It means more in satisfaction, more shopping enjoyment and greater economy.

VON PAPEN AIRS DEFIANCE OF REICHSTAG

BERLIN, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The German republic, as a result of Sunday's election, faced a situation today resembling the days of Bismarck, with Gen. Kurt von Schleicher in the role of "iron chancellor."

Chancellor Franz von Papen, head of the present cabinet, the power behind which is the affable but decisive Junker-Gen. von Schleicher, last night said his government intended to stay in power, defying the Reichstag if necessary.

Referring to the post-election riots yesterday which were attributed to the National Socialists and in which four were slain, the Chancellor said whoever is found responsible for the "regrettable events" would find the cabinet "determined to deal swiftly and summarily with them."

WILL PUNISH RIOTERS

Dr. Franz Bracht, dictator of Prussia, under von Papen, warned that the limit had been reached and that swift retribution would be meted out to offenders.

The Chancellor made it clear that he, and the general at his back, would continue to rule Germany without party support. He said:

"If yesterday's election had any significance, it was the indorsement by the German people of the government's effort to rid the country of party control.

"My colleagues and I intend to go before the Reichstag with our program of constructive effort and dare the members to unseat us in the face of the crying need for objective, non-partisan work.

The power of Prince Bismarck was founded on a similar situation.

HITLER OUTWITTED

In political circles the opinion today was that Sunday's elections resulted precisely as Gen. von Schleicher expected they would and that the General had outwitted not only the parties of the Left, but of Adolph Hitler, the fiery Nazzi leader, himself.

This expectation, however, gives the Communists hope they may not be outlawed, as has been suggested. If von Schleischer were to outlaw the Communists, it was pointed out, the subtraction of their membership from the Reichstag would give Hitler's Nazis a clear majority with which they could set up their own government.

BORAH PUZZLE ON CAMPAIGN

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Senator William E. Borah has decided whom to support in the coming presidential election, he said today, but he was not ready to announce his choice.

The Idaho legislator re-stated his campaign status as he passed through Chicago en route to his home as follows:

He will not support President Hoover on the Republican platform; there is "no possibility" that he will come ont for Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee; he will not back William D. Upshaw, of Georgia, the Prohibition candidate; there is "no third party" as far as he is concerned. He said:

"I will take an interest in my state election. My position is the same as I expressed it in the Senate recently on the Republican ticket. I don't think any more of its economic planks than I do of its prohibition plank."

Daughters of Artist In Crash, One Killed

VIENNA, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—Mrs. Marion Gladys Frank was killed, and her sister, Miss Harriet Adams, was injured seriously today in an automobile crash near Lambach, in upper Austria. The women are daughters of the American painter, John Quincy Adams.

FREE SERVICE ENDANGERS HOSPITALS

The increase of free work is threatening the financial structure of Pennsylvania hospitals, despite the fact that in all likelihood the hospitals will receive their full allotments of state aid, according to Miss Jessie J. Turnbull, superintendent of the Elizabeth Steel Magee Hospital, and president of the Hospital Conference of Pittsburgh.

This precarious situation not only is true of hospitals in this heavily-congested area, but is true generally of community hospitals throughout the state, she declared. The free load for July of the 36 hospitals in the local conference, 30 of which are state-aided, she said, showed an alarming increase, despite the most rigid economy.

Miss Turnbull said:

"We can't turn patients away if we're going to remain hospitals. Yet we can't treat a patient without spending something. It takes money to run a hospital.

"Fortunately, it looks as if the cut in state aid might be restored, and that will keep many hospitals from being compelled to curtail free care—which was certain to come. But I doubt if people realize just how disheartening the financial conditions of most hospitals is, the struggle they are putting up not to fail their communities or neighborhoods, and the hopeless rows of red-ink figures which greet them at the close of every month.

"Hospitals are not expected to pay, but they cannot continue to lose too much. Every hour a hospital runs costs a certain amount of money. It has to come from somewhere. Lately, it is not coming from anywhere."

SPEED TO VIEW SUN'S ECLIPSE

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—On the last day of this month occurs the only total eclipse of the sun that will be visible from any part of the United States until February 26, 1979.

Certain that 47 years is a long wait for another such opportunity, the astronomers of this country and Canada today started moving observatory apparatus to favorable sites along the path of the shadow of totality.

This shadow, about 100 miles wide, will sweep southeastward across the Province of Quebec, the northeastern portion of Vermont and New Hampshire, through Maine, over a few square miles of Massachusetts north of Concord and will strike the heel of Cape Cod and disappear over the Atlantic.

Florida Town Has No Debt Problem

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—At least one Florida municipality is having no financial troubles and has found a workable solution of the unemployment. Mayor M. Venable reported to the Governor's office that the town of Archer has no debts, no unpaid city employes and no trouble with the unemployment question, although about 25 men there are out of work.

MOVIE NOTES -:- Timely Gossip From Amusement World -:- LOCAL BILLS

'State Fair' to Star Will Rogers

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 1.

You can read a double significance into Fox's announcement that Will Rogers will play the farmer in the film version of "State Fair."

In the first place, this picture now definitely becomes Fox's contribution to the all-star cycle started by "Grand Hotel." With Rogers and Janet Gaynor in the cast, and with more important players to follow, "State Fair" promises to be one of the important specials of the year.

Will Rogers

Secondly, the casting of the cowboy comedian leaves a plain inference that he and Fox either have reached a new agreement or will do so in the near future. The old Rogers contract, calling for $225,000 a picture, will be up in September.

Meanwhile, Author Phil Stong is in Hollywood helping to adapt his best-seller for the screen. Henry King is to direct.

BOULEVARD TALK

Clara Bow's drop-in party last Friday night was in honor of her birthday. The flaming-haired star is now down to weight and will be ready to start her picture as soon as the script is finished. The illness of Scenarist Eddie Burke held up production for several weeks. Olympic athletes are receiving a royal welcome from the studios. Raoul Walsh entertained all American entrants at a luncheon in the Fox restaurant. Later on, the Brazilian contestants were the guests of Raul Roulien at tea. . . . The next Ann Harding picture will be directed by Gregory La Cava. It may or may not be the Adela Rogers Hyland story, "Bed of Roses," in which the blonde star is scheduled to go glamorous. . . . Maybe the films will be stealing Miriam Jordan, who's out here with the "Cynara" company. She took a test at Fox.

Clara Bow

CARRILLO STAR

Featured player in the production will be Leo Carrillo, who is now playing a successful stock engagement in Honolulu. The star will return here on the 14th, only two days before rehearsals are called for the film.

"Freedom" is the story of a great musician who goes to prison and assumes leadership of the convict band.

Faith Baldwin Lauds Film Drama

"I got a real thrill from my first view of 'Skyscraper Souls.' I expect to see it again, at least twice more. I am so proud that it has been given so fine a production. Direction, adaptation, cast, photography and sound seem to me to be just about perfect.

"True, changes have been made in the story, but I have no complaint to make on that score. 'Skyscraper Souls' has been made a far better picture than if the book had been closely adhered to. Much of the drama in the book was psychological, and that is not adaptable to the screen, which must translate drama into action. In doing this some things have been introduced which, candidly, I wish I had thought of first!

"Every member of the cast gives a true-to-life interpretation of the character. Warren William is superb, as always. I have always liked Maureen O'Sullivan and Norman Foster, and it seems to me that they are better in "Skyscraper Souls" than ever before. Verree Teasdale and Helen Coburn are splendid, as is Wallace Ford. Anita Page makes a most human and likeable creature of little Jenny, who was always a favorite of mine, while Jean Hersholt gives an exceptionally fine portrayal of Jake.

"All in all, 'Skyscraper Souls' is a swell picture. I only hope that a million persons will like it as much as I do. I am very honored to have my name connected with it."

Not Frenchy Is French Picture

By GEORGE SEIBEL

After seeing the third or fourth of the French films at the Avenue Cinema, one suddenly gets wise to the fact that these French films are not at all Frenchy. "Le Petit Cafe," this week's offering, with Maurice Chevalier as the head waiter, and his wife as the proprietor's daughter, is just as innocuous as an expurgated edition of Mrs. Hemans. It is a lively comedy of the "garcon" who comes in for a million dollars and gets into all sorts of trouble, even a duel. Chevalier sings with great gusto and waits with such dexterity that he must have had experience. Everybody makes much more noise and gesticulation than they do in Hollywood, but for Frenchiness or sophistication this film is nowhere. It was probably made for the French, as the naughty French shows are made for rich Americans and Brazilians.

George Seibel

There is also a very funny French film showing how a dentist's office is run on the Chauve Souris plan, and a very exciting scenic film of some American boys running the rapids of the Colorado River.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Barry Buchanan, former Pittsburgher and Tech graduate, who took to the business end of the theater rather than the expressionistic angle, is going to show New York a musical show of his own producing along about the end of September. It is called "Seein' Is Believin'" and it was to have been produced several months ago, as Mr. Buchanan announced, but he didn't get around to it. The tunes are by Jarrett Hill, who also did the score of "All in Fun," which Mr. Buchanan has in mind to produce when, and if winter comes. Mr. Buchanan's last visit to the old home town was as business manager of Peter Arno's rash venture as a producer, called, if we remember rightly, "Here Goes the Bride."

New York, which hasn't had a new show in several weeks, will have witnessed three openings this week, when the third, "Page Pygmalion," makes its bow Wednesday. "The Devil's Little Game" and Chamberlain Brown's Scrapbook broke the ice last night. Mr. Brown's production is a lot of this and a lot of that by a big company that has few "big names"—but possibilities.

Six weeks ago Madge Kennedy and James Rennie took over the management of "Bridal Wise," in which they are featured, when the producers gave it up. By keeping the show going in a New York theater, 59 persons, from actors to scrubwomen, have had six weeks of work they would not have had otherwise—and the play goes on.

Dizzy 'Death Swing' Kennywood Act

Costi Florescu, now making his first appearance, afternoon and evening, daily, in Kennywood Park, performs at the top of a swaying pole, 115 feet high. His finishing stunt is called the "Death Swing." In it Florescu uses two poles. He stand on a small platform at the top of one pole, holding between his teeth the end of a rope. The other end of the strand is fastened to a higher pole. At a signal he leaps into space, hanging only by his teeth, and swinging back and forth like a giant pendulum. He uses no nets or other safety devices.

BITS OF LIFE

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Old Dog—New Tricks

THE OFFICE boy was talking.

"Yep, that's what I heard. Two of those efficiency guys are gonna start working around here tomorrow morning. I just heard Mr. Mosby telling Miss Jepson about it. Not one, but two."

Henry looked up with a start. Efficiency men! Just another way of spelling trouble. That meant that people would lose their jobs. Many people, maybe. Perhaps even he—. But no. It was silly even to think about such a thing. He had been with the firm far too long. They'd never dream of letting him go.

Henry coughed. He summoned the boy.

"James," he said, "—er—I happened to overhear a portion of your conversation, although I hasten to assure you that I was not eavesdropping. When you spoke about efficiency men, you—er—you were joking, were you not?"

"No, Henry. I wasn't kidding. It's strictly on the up and up. Two efficiency birds will show up the first thing in the morning. The firm's gonna cut the payroll 25 per cent, I hear."

Henry walked home that night. It was almost five miles from the office to his home, but he walked the distance—and he could have gone on much further. For the man's mind was in a turmoil. A great fear was lurking there now; the fear that he would be thrown out of employment.

Before going on, let's take a short glance at Henry's background. Henry's great fault was that he was far too conservative. Did you ever meet one of those birds who lean back and say with a sigh: "Ah, if I had only taken one little risk among my many chances, what a happy man I'd be today?" Certainly you have. Well, that was Henry.

The man's parents had been extremely conservative, and Henry was an only son. In school, he was a model pupil. Dull—but model. While the other kids were playing, Henry was reading. He plodded through college without realizing that there might be something in collegiate life in addition to study.

When he graduated he wanted nothing flighty for a career. He answered an advertisement that had been inserted by an old and sturdy manufacturing company. They placed him in the clerical department — and there he remained.

The years marched by. Time after time, during his term of employment, far less talented men passed him and entered executive positions. There wasn't a doubt in the world that he understood the business better than these other men—but Henry never talked about it.

One morning—and it hadn't been many months before—Henry had heard himself referred to as "the old man." It had been something of a shock at first because Henry was by no means an old man. He was only 50 years of age, and he was still the most dependable clerk in the entire organization.

As he thought it over, however, Henry began to smile to himself. "The old man." It wasn't a bad title really when you got to thinking about it. It had something of an affectionate ring to it. Then, too, it meant that the office realized that he was past the follies of youth—and that he was the ideal, middle-aged, conservative worker. Not bad. Not bad at all.

But now everything was different. Terribly different. Henry reached his tiny apartment and threw himself on the bed. He twisted and he turned. Those experts would have little use for a timid, old soul such as he.

Henry clenched his fists. For the first time in his life he was actually fighting for something. Somewhere, somehow, he must find some way of beating this thing that was out to crush him.

For hours he wracked his brain. Suddenly he sat up. The idea had hit him! The big idea! He'd show them. Just wait . . .

The office boy had been quite right. When he entered the office the next morning, Henry found the two efficiency experts already on the job. He said nothing; just walked to his desk with a trace of a smile.

But the big shock was reserved for a later hour. For the first time in the 29 years he had been with the firm, Henry took two hours for lunch. And when he returned, it was a miracle that the entire office force didn't collapse in a faint.

For there stood Henry in a pair of cream-colored trousers, a sporty blue coat, a pair of suede shoes and a light red tie. His hair was slicked back, and he tossed off the choice aroma of a walking barber shop. He stepped to his desk with a springy tread—and winked at the boss's secretary on the way across!

Henry pretended to notice nothing. He turned up the following day in a new outfit that was even more startling than the first. And when Saturday rolled around and there was no pink slip in his envelope, he knew he had won his fight.

"I knew I'd show them," he exulted. "Call me old, will they?"

On the following Saturday, however, there was a note in his envelope. Read it with me.

"Because of your years of service with us," it read, "we had no intention of including you in our necessary cuts. We must now regretfully inform you, however that your services are no longer required. Your complete change of character does not fit in with the plans of our conservative firm."

Operatic Star Makes Debut Over WCAE

Queena Mario, Metropolitan Opera Company soprano who recently joined the ranks of NBC artists, is co-starred with Walter Mills, noted concert baritone, on the new National Artists Service program with the NBC Symphony Orchestra directed by Cesare Sodero on WCAE tonight at 9 o'clock. The new series combines the NBC Artists' Service Musicale and the Civic Concert Hour, formerly heard from New York and Chicago. Miss Mario rose to stardom from a successful newspaper career as a columnist and special writer. Later she turned to art. Then she began to develop her voice and subsequently appeared with the San Carlo Opera Company.

Miss Mario

Jay C. Flippen, vaudeville and radio entertainer, makes his debut as the central figure in a new weekly program entitled "Jay C. Flippencies," with Freddie Rich's orchestra and vocalists, tonight at 9 over a Columbia network including WJAS. Other artists on the program include Helen Nugent, contralto; Charles Carlile, tenor, and the Four Eton Boys.

A new series of talks on business conditions and the industrial world is introduced on KDKA tonight at 7:15 by Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Chamber of Commerce. The programs are under the direction of John C. McCloy, market editor of KDKA.

Program Pointers

Commander C. M. James, U. S. N., who is in charge of the Navy Department's offices in Pittsburgh, is guest speaker during a special American Legion program on WCAE tonight at 8:30 with Betty Cruikshank, contralto, Raymond Griffin, basso, and an orchestra under the direction of James G. Borrelli . . . On the same station at 8, Julia Sanderson and Frank Crumit sing "Same Old Moon," from Jerome Kern's "Lucky," as their featured duet. Frank's interpretation of the new English musical comedy hit, "All for the Love of a Lady," also is included on the program.

Com. James

"The Rocket to the Moon," the fantastic story of a rocket that careens through space at the rate of 7,000 miles a minute, is presented on KDKA at 8 tonight.

Georgie Price offers a parody of the song "Paradise" and sings "Just One More Chance" a la Ed Wynn, Will Rogers and Max Schmeling on WJAS at 7:45.

Another true dramatization from the New York police files, "When Gang Meets Gang," the story of one of the country's greatest gang wars, is scheduled on WCAE during the cigaret dance hour at 10. Traffic noises of New York have been made a regular "sound effect" of these programs.

Joe Sartory, who was at the sending end of a telegraph wire 30 years ago, celebrates his birthday today at the receiving end, decoding the telegraphed play-by-play account of the Pirates-Quakers game at Philadelphia for WWSW listeners beginning at 3:30.

The story of a legendary menace surrounding a fort, "The Fort Terror Murders," is the Crime Club radio play on WJAS at 9:30.

Fan Fare

Because Irma Glen, NBC organist, is out in Virginia on a vacation, it is no sign that she does not practice . . . She had a piano moved down to the beach . . . June Pursell, blonde singer of ballads, has acquired a beautiful tan riding and swimming in Westchester . . . Cliff Soubier has a geologist's hobby . . . He collects crystals . . . Davey Rose, pianist with Harold Stokes' Orchestra, never smokes a pipe more than one day each month . . . He has 45 of them . . . George Hicks, the announcer, earned his letters in football, baseball, tennis, track and basketball while in school.

Miss Glen

The "ghost" in Studio F at the NBC building in New York is no more. Engineers, baffled at being whistled at every time they left the monitor booth, investigated and found that the outer door acted as a plunger in the compartment, compressing the air, which whistled as it sought to escape.

They are thinking of forming a Prince of Wales alumni association in the NBC studios. Harry Reser taught the royal heir to play the banjo and Kelvin Keech instructed him in ukulele playing. Frank Luther once sang at a private concert in England where the Prince played the trap drums and Johnny Marvin was his favorite entertainer at the Kit Kat Club in London. Johnny and the Prince used to exchange gifts in token of their mutual admiration.

Graham Harris' automobile has been dubbed "Canntakeit," because it has been struck by other cars on the road three times this summer and still goes.

Tenor Soloist

JOHN DUNLAP

Well-known Pittsburgh tenor, featured with Jeanne Clasky, soprano, in a special Frank & Seder broadcast over WCAE at 6:30 tonight in celebration of the store's semi-annual Buyers' and Managers' Sale. Music is furnished by Cliff Marshall and his string ensemble. Charles H. Joseph is master of ceremonies.

Long Warfare Between Ainey and Pinchots

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 2.—Chairman W. D. B. Ainey of the Public Service Commission, charged by Gov. Pinchot with misconduct in office, was warned last spring that the Governor would be hot on his trail. He was advised to resign and go into private practice as an advisor in utility proceedure. He refused to accept the advice.

Mark Shields

There has been long and bitter warfare between the Pinchot family and the aged utility commission chief. Pinchot has been anxious to force him out of office for years, but has never been able to lay hands on the evidence necessary to convict him of misconduct. In every battle between the Governor and the Public Service Commission he has leveled his heaviest guns of criticism against Ainey.

In the Congressional primary last April in the Fifteenth District, the northeastern section of the state, Mrs. Pinchot was a candidate for the Republican nomination against Congressman Louis T. McFadden. She was soundly beaten.

Ainey was charged by the Pinchot family with being the brains of the opposition to Mrs. Pinchot. The charge had justification. Ainey's home is in Montrose, Susquehanna County, part of the Pinchot district, and he has considerable influence there.

Governor Embittered By Defeat of Wife

The defeat of Mrs. Pinchot embittered the Governor, and he has been looking for a peg on which to hang new and conclusive charges against Ainey. When A. A. Chapman, secretary to the late Thomas E. Mitten, Philadelphia traction magnate, charged some weeks ago that Ainey had been paid $150,000 over a period of years by Mitten, the Governor received the charges, and invited Ainey to hear them. He did not, however, express any opinion on the worth of the charges.

When later he uncovered apparently conclusive evidence that Ainey's bills in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, had been paid by the late Arthur Thompson, Pittsburgh utility chief, he demanded the resignation of Ainey. He prosecuted a search for any other evidence which might react against the commission chairman, just as political wiseacres had predicted he would.

They had no foreknowledge that things could be uncovered which the Governor has found. But if their advice had been followed last April Ainey would not now be confronted by the apparent impasse which has engulfed him.

Moreover, the Republican state organization would not be carrying into a state and national campaign the handicap of the charges which have revolutionized the personnel of the Public Service Commission, permitting the Governor to go before the people now—if he wishes—and claim that everything he has charged in the way of favoritism to utilities was founded on a sound basis.

Stadtlander Seeks Speakership Support

W. F. Stadtlander, member of the House from the North Side, is not disposed to yield without a struggle to the Speakership ambitions of his McKees Rocks colleague, Dr. Joseph G. Steedle. Stadtlander, a veteran of several sessions, is not without his friends in the House, and has been carrying on a quiet canvass for votes.

Two candidates cannot well enter the lists from Allegheny County. The situation will resolve itself into a question of which of the two Allegheny countians can muster the most strength at home and abroad, and the one who lags behind probably will step aside for his more fortunate associate.

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay is being suggested to Gov. Pinchot as a successor of Judge Joseph M. Swearingen of Common Pleas Court, whose resignation is expected at any time. Judge Swearingen has withheld his resignation because of uncertainty as to whom the Governor would name as his successor.

It is understood Lindsay would be acceptable to the other judges, though his appointment might not be relished by some leaders of the regular organization in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County.

Lindsay is in Harrisburg today, but his cause was advanced before the Governor by others. It is being pointed out to the Governor that Lindsay would stand an excellent chance of election. This prediction being based on the substantial number of votes he obtained in the past judicial primary.

DEFICIT GROWS, COUNCIL SEEKS ECONOMIES

Payroll Fund Shortage Feared as Revenue Collections Fall

The need for drastic economies if the city is to meet its payrolls in the last two months of this year is to be discussed today at a special meeting of finance committee of City Council.

Controller James P. Kerr has promised a complete report on tax collections for the first half of the year. That a serious slump has occurred in the city revenues is now generally admitted.

Members of Council are prepared to discuss ways and means of meeting the situation. The city, entering the year with a deficit of more than $900,000 and not having the advantage of certain special revenues, such as the guarantee of deposit fund, which it had last year, is faced with an increased deficit which threatens to mount to alarming figures.

The furlough system which reduces the pay of city employes, including the Mayor and Council, to the extent of two weeks salary, is apparently not sufficient to meet the emergency.

A proposal to borrow $5,000,000 from the Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation to improve the river fronts to provide parking area and belt boulevards will be discussed by Council.

If the improvement of the wharves is approved by Council, it is believed that the money can be borrowed from the government at 3½ per cent as against the most recent rate of 4¼ per cent paid by the city for bonds.

Other matters to come up are an emergency request for $8,000 to combat the mine fire at the Crafton Borough line, Twenty-eighth Ward, and a $130,000 extension to the Negley Run sewer which will be made necessary by the construction of a new government dam in the Allegheny River as Aspinwall.

PLOT TO FREE YOUTH FROM JAIL FAILS

Pair Tries Holdup of Officer After Taking Control of Car

Two young men who, police say, commandeered an automobile and its driver and kidnaped a McKeesport policeman, today were held for court trial in McKeesport Police Station.

Roy Crawford, 25, of Duquesne, and William Shaffer, 22, of Youngstown, O., according to testimony in police court, forced Frank Todd, of 706 Evans avenue, McKeesport, to drive around while they sought a holdup victim, then at the point of a revolver, kidnaped Patrolman William Connelly, in civilian clothes, and battled with police at Fifth avenue and Huey street when Connelly signaled to another officer.

Crawford, it was reported, said he wanted money to get to Greensburg to effect the escape of a pal, held by state police as a member of the gang, which terrorized Westmoreland and Fayette counties in a series of robberies.

Todd was in his automobile in Duquesne when the two men, he testified, ordered him to take them for a ride. He complied when a revolver was displayed.

Todd refused to join in a holdup and as his gasoline was running low when in Fifth avenue, McKeesport, Crawford and Shaffer, he said, forced him to stop while they kidnaped Connelly. Connelly, thinking it was a joke, entered the car, but when covered with revolvers, he said, he waited until the car reached Fifth avenue and Huey street, where he signaled Patrolman Hopkins, then grabbed the steering wheel and forced the car to the curb. As the two men jumped out both officers began to battle them. They were overpowered.

Magistrate E. M. Trich today held Crawford on a charge of violating the firearms law and held Shaffer on a charge of pointing firearms in an attempt to rob.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 2.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Everett Sanders, the very able head of the Republican campaign, went clear up to the old boss's home at Northampton to try and get Mr. Coolidge to help keep the Democrats from getting their "bonus" this fall. The Army drove the soldiers out. Now they want Coolidge to help drive the Democrats out of Washington. Both army's are equally destitute, in fact the soldiers have worked since the Democrats have.

Will Rogers

This is not an election of parties, or policies this fall, it's an election where both sides really need the work. In fact, I think if you would split the salaries between every two candidates running, they would call off the election.

Yours, WILL.

EAST LIBERTY CAFE HELD UP

Holding up the Contis restaurant, 5935 Penn avenue, East Liberty, two young bandits early today escaped with $65 taken from the cash register and from Nick Sabelli, the night manager.

The pair, Sabelli said, flourished revolvers and forced him to take the money from the register and a few dollars from his own pockets. They escaped in an automobile.

Meyer Simmone, of 1804 Center avenue, a cab driver, was robbed of $5 by a man whom he had driven to Brushton avenue and Annon way, East End.

MORE TICKETS FOR WEST VIEW

Several hundred boys and girls were disappointed today because they were not able to obtain strips of free tickets for the National Kiddies' Day celebration at West View Park. The supply was exhausted at all exchange stations last night.

The Sun-Telegraph could have secured more tickets for distribution for today's big party, but it was deemed inadvisable to do it, because the greater the crowd, the fewer would be the opportunities for the youngsters to get all the rides the tickets called for.

However, if you have coupons that could not be redeemed, hold them until tomorrow. The Sun-Telegraph has obtained another supply of tickets for Friday of this week for West View Park, and these will be ready for distribution at the exchange stations tomorrow.

Allison Park Wife Asks Search for Mate

The Missing Persons Bureau today was searching for William Winkler, 29, of Allison Park, who disappeared from his home midnight Sunday. His wife, Mrs. Mabel Winkler, told police that her husband was a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad employe and was working regularly. He is the father of two children.

Drys Seize Two Men In South Side Raid

In a raid on a house in South Thirteenth street prohibition agents yesterday reported seizing 570 pints of beer, five gallons of wine, a half gallon of moonshine and 24 barrels of beer mash. John McMasters and Milton Lipps were arrested.

Two other raids, one in Reedsdale street and the other in Unity Township, Westmoreland County, yielded the agents liquor.

Julia Ward Howe's Daughter Injured

FREEDOM WON BY EVANGELIST

John Barber, 55, a Negro, of 6405 Frankstown avenue, was discharged last night by Alderman Michael DeRosa, Jr., when he promised to shorten his evening outdoor church services at Lowell street and Frankstown avenue and keep better order among his hearers. Barber was charged with maintaining a nuisance by nearby residents.

Barber was arrested Wednesday at Frankstown and Lincoln avenues after a riot call to police. It was then erroneously reported he lived at 6504 Frankstown avenue.

Mayor to Keep Job Until He Yells to Resign

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Fifteen different parties tossed in 37,000,000 votes at a rough guess on the hay scales.

In European elections there are always the right wing, the left wing and the neck. And the neck is almost American, for it consists of the Wuerttemberg farmers who got two seats out of a possible 607 chairs.

We've got about two farmers in our Congress. But one of 'em has got to stand up. It shows that politics is about the same all over the world. The citizens throw in their votes and the ward leaders pick out the ones they can use.

One or our western towns called off its voting altogether. After all, why should one day spoil the next four years? It's going to allow its mayor to stay in office until he falls flat on his face, kicks his feet in the air and hollers for a resignation blank.

Penn Twp. Home Damaged by Fire

Pittsburgh firemen were called into Penn Township early today to a fire at the home of Lloyd Miller at 256 Coumbia avenue. More than 1,000 feet of hose was used to reach the flames. Damage was estimated at $1,500. Miller and his wife fled the fire in night clothing.

County, While Cutting Budget, Keeps Large, Costly Motor Fleet

In spite of drastic budget cuts, the county is still maintaining an expensive fleet of motor trucks and motorized equipment.

It is estimated that automobiles will cost the county approximately $355,000 this year, including maintenance and depreciation. Last year the cost was approximately $450,000.

Nearly all county authorities ride in county cars. Here is how the 76 county passenger cars are distributed:

Each of the three County Commissioners has a car, and there are 16 in the Road Maintenance Department, 10 in the Bridge Department, six in the Bureau of Parks, eight in the Detective Bureau, five in the Bureau of Weights and Measures, and four in the Controller's Office.

Each of the six road division superintendents, some of whom under the old administration were mentioned as having private work done by county labor, has been alloted a county automobile.

Each of three county road engineers has a private automobile to inspect construction work. The department of investigation and claims has three automobiles, and there is one for the landscape division and one for the sign and safety division.

The District Attorney has a county car, the Sheriff has one, and each of the six directors of county departments has one car each.

The Gumbert Home and School have four cars, the tax revision board has one and the photographic department one. In addition to all these, there are five motor vehicles used as a taxi service for employes on county business.

To manage this fleet of cars and, in addition, 109 county trucks, 27 rollers, 27 water wagons, 36 tractors and 21 motorcycles, the county spends in a year more than $30,000 for parts and tires and more than $45,000 for gasoline and oil.

ELIMINATE WASTE IN GOVERNMENT

In compiling the total expense for this year, the new value of the county's motor equipment was estimated at $750,000, and one-sixth of that amount assumed as depreciation. This is conservative as it is known to be rare for a county car to have a life of six years.

To drive passenger cars for county officials there are 20 paid chauffeurs, representing a total annual payroll of approximately $34,000.

At the McKean street garage, South Side, there were 62 mechanics and clerks. There are now but 31, but this number is to be increased to 32, it is said.

The county is still buying its gasoline from retail distributors. If the county follows suggestion already made and buys in tank car lots, about 35 per cent will be saved in the lower price and in avoiding payment of the distributors' tax.

The complete motorization of the entire county government took place largely in boom times under the former administration. And the motor battalions have never been demobilized.

(Tomorrow, further discussion of possible savings in local government expenditure.)

BUCK PICTURE THRILLS 1,000 NEWSIES

"Bring 'Em Back Alive," the Frank Buck wild animal picture, is thrilling big crowds at the Warner Theater, but the thrills these crowds are getting cannot compare with the excitement the picture created at a special showing this morning for nearly 1,000 home delivery carrier boys employed by the Sun-Telegraph.

Imagine 1,000 husky lads watching that fearful death struggle between the crocodile and the black leopard or the battle of the python and the man-eating Royal Bengal tiger, two of the really sensational scenes in the film, and you'll get an idea of a real thrill. Yes, those youngsters were just riveted to their seats through these two remarkable wild-animal fights. And the sympathies of these youngsters were aroused at the plight of the lost baby elephant that had strayed from the herd.

The Sun-Telegraph carrier boys' party had been originally scheduled for the Warner Theater, but owing to the large crowds "Bring 'Em Back Alive" is drawing to this house, necessitating the opening of the Warner at 10 o'clock in the morning, the party was transferred to the Harris and an extra print of the picture secured for this purpose.

It is a really great picture for the grown-ups but, by far, greater for the youngsters because it is a practical lesson in natural history and also shows the strange people of many worlds. Much of it was made in the jungles of the Federated Malay States and all of it is real, unstaged and unrehearsed. It is full of adventure, strife, and sparkled in spots with comedy.

Yes, those Sun-Telegraph carrier boys had a great thrill and a great morning.

BOLIVIA MASSES ARMY FOR WAR

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 2.—(INS.)—With Bolivia determined to push her way to the sea through the disputed Chaco region, backed by approximately 80,000 troops, and with Paraguay equally determined to resist such a movement with an equal number of troops, war between the two nations appeared but a matter of hours today.

The Paraguayan Congress authorized a government decree for the mobilization of reserves and gave the president dictatorial powers to act in the emergency, and at the same time approved the text of a government note protesting to the League of Nations against alleged Bolivian attacks upon her forts.

An inventory of the estate of Annie M. Reymer filed in Orphans Court shows it was appraised at $298,000. She died July 2 at her home in Negley avenue.

By her will, real estate at Negley and Wilkins avenues and $25,000 was left to her brother, Samuel S. Reymer. Several cousins were given small bequests and the will gives $2,000 to Mary Creely and $1,000 to Julia Kovich, servants, and $500 to Harold D. Foul, chauffeur. A gift of $5,000 was made to the Second Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh.

The remainder of the estate was left in trust, the income to be paid her brother, Samuel, for life. At his death $5,000 is to paid the Children's Hospital and smaller bequests to other institutions. The estate is then to be divided into two shares, one-half of the income to be paid to her sister-in-law, Iva Reymer, for life, and the other half to Lydia Ann Reymer, daughter of her brother, Samuel.

FUND FOR PLANE VISIT DENIED

The public would rather have a band concert than to see a flock of Army bombing planes fly over the city and land at the County Airport, the County Commissioners decided in vetoing Airport Director Hal Bazley's request for $200 to bring the planes here next month.

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern voted "No" when Commissioner C. M. Barr voted to grant the request. McGovern said:

"It is not the time to spend money for this. Flying is the same whether there is one plane or 10 in the air. The people would get more good out of a band concert."

Barr explained that he voted for the bombers because it would be a demonstration of national defense but he withdrew his motion after McGovern's negative vote.

OUR PIRATES AND THE PHILLIES

BENNY LEONARD BILLY TOWNSEND

ABOVE WE SEE Benny Leonard, former lightweight champion of the world, in the midst of his more or less successful comeback campaign.

Is he the trim little fellow who began his career in the ring 20 years ago and went on to perform feats that caused him to be set down in ring annals as one of the immortals, mentioned in the same breath and compared with the masterful Joe Gans?

HE IS NOT. Here we see a partly bald, middle-aged man, who would appear more in place sitting at a desk, a rather wild look in his eyes, as he sprawls, spraddle-legged, to the attack against a youngster who couldn't have carried his water bucket in his prime.

But Benny is getting by. Behind that high forehead are fighting brains. A great boxer and a sharp puncher in his time, when they had some really good lightweights around, Benny has not forgotten the science and strategy of boxing. He still can outsmart the young 'uns. He is fighting to recoup his fortune, gone the way of many others in the stock market and other ventures. Admired when he retired while at the zenith of his power and fame, leaving behind him his title, and scoffed at when he announced his plans for a comeback, Leonard already has fought his way back to the point where he is set for a big money shot against Jimmy McLarnin in New York this summer. He has won back thousands of his old camp followers and his name again means something in the headlines.

PROVING ONCE MORE that a man who thoroughly learns his craft, no matter what it may be, never quite loses the knack. The boxing fans may prefer the rough, swinging fighter and mauler to the clever, scientific boxer, but it is the clever, scientific boxer who lasts, if he takes care of himself outside the ring. Leonard never took any bad beatings. He was knocked out twice early in his career, but went on to the heights. Today, at an age when his contemporaries all have folded up and quit, he still is able to concede many years to youthful aspirants and give them boxing lessons.

THE QUESTION NATURALLY presents itself:
Could Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion, years younger than Leonard, come back, if he had to for financial reasons?

UNDOUBTEDLY. He might not be able to regain all of his old-time effectiveness, but, given an opportunity to properly prepare himself, he could come back, following his absence of only a few years, [illegible] all, or nearly all, of the young heavyweights now before the public. For Tunney was of the same thinking school as Leonard. He fought with his brains as well as his hands. And spurred on by necessity, he could do as well as, or better than Leonard, taking their ages into consideration.

What is it about sports that so grips the people that 105,000 will turn out for the opening spectacle of the Olympic Games in a year in which it was freely predicted the international competition would prove a flop, due to economic conditions?

There was nothing to the opening ceremonies but ceremony, pageantry. Merely a parade of the athletes, the taking of the vow, addresses, music and a few spectacular sidelights. Yet the capacity of the Stadium was sold out well in advance of the day of the opening.

ONE OF THE reasons for the passion for sports is the fact that they give the folks a chance to sit out in the fresh air and bask in the sunlight, Nature's finest tonic.

ANOTHER IS THE OPPORTUNITY to give vent to suppressed emotions, a sort of letting off of steam, of stored-up energy. The thrill loosens the vocal chords, causes the heart to beat faster, the pulse to quicken. In short, we have in sports a sort of emotional safety valve.

And behind it all, aren't all humans more or less dreamers, who, themselves denied the opportunity to excell in the field before the cheering multitudes, are prone to picture themselves in conquering hero roles? For an afternoon, or a night, or a day, they can sit there and imagine themselves in the places of the men writing history before their eyes with feats of athletic prowess, and the kick they get out of it adds something to their lives. Call the intriguing element anything you want to, but we choose to regard it as inspiration.

KID McCOY, former welterweight champion of the world, recently released from San Quentin on parole after serving eight years of a 20-year sentence for the slaying of his sweetheart, is back in Detroit, his old stamping grounds, starting life anew at the age of 59 where, 40 years ago, the 19-year-old son of a preacher, he began his glamorous career. He once was a millionaire, the most married man of his time, a Beau Brummel, a globe trotter, a sportsman with a French villa and an Italian estate, the companion of Maurice Maeterlinck, with Richard Harding Davis, the author, as his publicist.

NOW he is broke, chastened in spirit, bald and gray, with little left of his old self but the soft-spoken manner that charmed so many women that he was married nine times. And this is his sermon to the youth of the land:

"Stay out of the fight game. Don't be misled by the success of the topnotchers. It's all right for a few years, but it takes a lot and gives little in return. When you're through, you're THROUGH. You know nothing else. You are not fitted to do anything. Fit yourself, instead, for something that you can live by and work at throughout your entire lifetime. But, on the other hand...."

Somehow, you know the man has lived.

When the Pirates lost again to the Phillies yesterday, the setback marked the tenth time the Quakers have taken the measure of the Corsairs in 14 starts this season. If the locals had to play the Phillies daily, with the same measure of non-success, their average today would be .281 and they would be last instead of first in the league standing, behind the Cincinnati Reds, who are in the cellar with a mark of more than .400. Which should be some consolation for the fans, for the Phillies are met only 22 times, the same as each of the other clubs.

The Corsairs have fattened their standing at the expense of the Reds, whom they have beaten 11 times; Cardinals and Cubs, each of whom they have downed 10 times; the Giants, whom they have beaten nine times, and the Dodgers, who have bowed eight times. Next to the Phillies, Bill McKechnie's Braves have been the toughest opposition for the Pirates. Boston has won four games and lost six to the locals. The Cubs have beaten the Pirates seven times, the Cardinals and Reds each six times, the Dodgers five times, and the Giants three times.

By FRANK G. MENKE

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2.—Unless the judges of the Olympic races proceed to speed up their decisions, the entire multitude which has been attending the leg muscle combats will go completely daffy from shattered nerves due to prolonged waiting for verdicts.

Nothing like the indecisiveness, the prolonged pow-wows and the age-long discussions over who won a heat, who was second and so on ever has happened on the American continent.

The officials have taken from 10 to 15 minutes to make up their minds as to who was who and what was what in duels where the finish was of blanket variety. They have held up the official declaration anywhere from 10 minutes to more than an hour.

OFFICIALS VACILLATE

And it has been their quaint custom to order the next race delayed until such time as they have come to a conclusion relative to the preceding heat.

Eddie Tolan

The policy of "there's no hurry about this" has been extended even to field contests. Often the combatants have long gone from the scene of conflict before any announcement is made as to who won, and usually there is a long delay after that in clarioning the complete result.

The boys and girls around here, plus their mammas and their papas, are not so much concerned with what will happen at the Stadium this afternoon as they are about the reason for the ruling in the 100-meter final for men yesterday—and the eternity of time that was required by the judges to decide who won the succeeding contests on the saucer.

METCALFE SEEN VICTOR

About 99 per cent of the experts on field, who were directly on the finish line, and just that number of humans who were seated opposite it in the stands, thought Ralph Metcalfe had won the 100 meters by a margin of more than a foot—going away. The announcer backed them up with his immediate statement:

"Unofficially, the result is Metcalfe, Tolan and Jonath."

Metcalfe was given a roaring

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE MYSTERY OF THE ROLLING BALL—A granite monument on the Miller lot in the cemetery at Memphis, Mich., consisting of a base on which rests a 2,800-pound ball, has caused much conjecture since it was erected more than 24 years ago. Unaided by human agency, the ball has slipped a quarter of the way around in a rolling—not a revolving—motion. A flat rough spot on the side of the ball indicates the spot on which it rested originally. Among the suggested causes of the phenomenon are gravitation, the heat of the sun moving over the surface of the ball, and the processes of thawing and freezing, but no definite and satisfactory solution has been vouchsafed so far.

PARKS LINKS PLAY OPENS

BULLETIN.

Michael Evans, scoring 41-39—80, led the early finishers in the qualifying round for the South County Park golf championship today.

The county parks championship golf tournaments are scheduled to get under way today with 36-hole qualifying tests on both the North and South Park courses, under the supervision of Jimmy McFarland and Al McBride, pros at the respective layouts.

Starting time has been alloted a number of entrants at South Park, but it is likely that post starting times will be the order of proceedure at both courses, due to the fairly heavy entry list. Match play will get under way tomorrow and the tourneys will be concluded Thursday.

McBride and McFarland plan a team championship match for the near future, with golfers from the two park courses and Schenley competing. A county championship event also is planned.

Helen Jacobs Choice For Maidstone Title

EAST HAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Once more it is Helen Jacobs against the field in the Maidstone Club's seventh annual women's invitation tennis tournament.

The California girl, ranked second only to Helen Wills Moody nationally, is a strong favorite to win the singles title, although the field includes such stars as Mrs. L. A. Harper, Mary Greef, Sarah Palfrey, Josephine Cruickshank, Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn and many another.

Dead Heat Fair Verdict In 'Century'—Robertson

By LAWSON ROBERTSON,
Head Coach the American Olympic Teams.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 2.—Eddie Tolan's victory in the 100 meters final here yesterday afternoon was one of the most spectacular finishes that I have ever seen in my career.

The diminutive veteran, calling on all his speed, his stamina and his wisdom, won by the width of a razor blade from Ralph Metcalfe, and there were many who did not think that Tolan was first to break the tape. They accorded this distinction to Metcalfe, who came with cyclonic speed in the last 20 yards and was running over all opposition.

I imagine if it had been called a dead heat there wouldn't have been an argument anywhere within the stadium.

BRILLIANT VICTORY

It was a brilliant victory for the U. S. A. because our boys faced from the beginning the greatest of 100-meter men that Europe and the Orient ever has sent against us. Tolan needed all that he had to win. He had to smash a world's record in the effort and both Tolan and Metcalfe had to run the greatest race of their career to beat back the gallant charge of Arthur Jonath, the German whirlwind.

Our hopes for conquest in the 400-meters hurdles were knocked sideways by an Irishman named Robert Tisdall. This fellow showed us something truly spectacular in the most gruelling of dashes and our best was second with Glen Hardin and third with F. Morgan Taylor. But that was more than we expected in the beginning.

Tisdall won by a big margin, was running easily at the end and his time was 51 8-10, which would have been a new world record if he had not knocked over one of his hurdles. The time of 52 turned in by Hardin gives him a tie for the record made by Taylor in 1928.

O'CALLAGHAN VICTOR

No suspense was occasioned when Dr. Pat O'Callaghan, of Ireland, won the hammer throw. He was a great lad in 1928, and greater now. His victory was immensely popular because he is just about the best liked fellow at the village and all who have met him were rooting for him.

With O'Callaghan's victory, the Irish flag went up for the second time in a single day of Olympic competition—a unique happening.

Stella Walsh, of Cleveland, running for Poland, proved quite conclusively in winning the heat and the semi-final in the 100 meters dash and cracking world efforts in her races, that she is just about the greatest girl runner in the world.

Johnny Risko Wins Over Tuffy Griffiths

CLEVELAND, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight, won a 12-round decision from Tuffy Griffiths, of Chicago, last night before 7,000 spectators in the Municipal Stadium. Infighting proved Tuffy's downfall.

Bruno Sala, Pittsburgh, won by a technical knockout over Harry Fuerstein, Sandusky, in the fifth of their scheduled six-round bout.

OLYMPIC MAT CHAMPS BOW

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—One defending Olympic wrestling champion was eliminated last night and another faced the same fate after the first day of grappling competition in the Olympic games.

Oswald Kapp, Estonia, winner of the lightweight title at Amsterdam four years ago, dropped two successive matches, the first to C. Pacome, France, and the second to C. Karpati, Hungary, in the final bout of the night.

T. Sjostedt, defending Swedish champion, had three points against him and faced the possibility of receiving two more this week, which would send him out of the events.

Pete J. Mehringer, Yankee ace from the University of Kansas, became a heavy favorite in the light-heavyweight division when he body-slammed Sjostedt, 1928 Olympic champion, to defeat in a catch-as-catch-can match.

The United States took its second trouncing within a few hours with foils at the hands of France fencers last night, 10 out of 16 bouts, in the barrage necessitated by the triple tie in which Italy, France and the United States found themselves late in the day. The defeat virtually eliminated this country in the battle for the team championship.

PIRATES DROP THIRD IN ROW TO PHILLIES

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—Instead of being downcast over the misfortunes which have overtaken them in the City of Brotherly Love, the league-leading Pirates this morning were determined to make the best of a bad local job. The Buccos looked forward to a victory this afternoon which would carry a lot of comfort. They were swamped by the Phillies yesterday, 18 to 5, but the average big leaguers contends that a real pasting every now and then is good for a team. If this be true the Pirates should collect some premiums on the disaster of yesterday.

Grinning in glee over the reverses sustained by the Buccos here was Dick Bartell, former shortstop of the invading host. Richard opened a vengeful campaign against his former buddies just as soon as he appeared against them in a Quaker uniform. That was last spring.

Since Bartell became a Phil, his team has taken 23 decisions in 36 fights and the peppery shortfielder has been at the bottom of many of the verdicts. Dick was his usual pestiferous self yesterday as the Pirates took another on the button.

BUC LEAD CUT

The latest triumph of the Quakers gave them their tenth victory of the season over the Buccos, who have been able to take the measure of the Phillies only four times. Moreover, the Pittsburgh setback reduced its lead over the Philadelphia foemen to seven games. The Cubs, in the runnerup spot, are five games below the leaders.

Steve Swetonic is slated to tackle the Phillies this afternoon in the fourth and final game of the series. The home team has been victorious in the three games played. The Pirates rather expect Manager Shotton to send Jim Elliott back to the slab as Burt sometimes uses Jim against the Freebooters on two days' rest. If Elliott does not pitch, Edgar Holley is the likely home selection. Holley, a righthander, recently achieved a neat victory over the Pirates in Pittsburgh.

LEAD BY FIVE GAMES

There were no excuses or alibis in the Pirate camp regarding their overwhelming defeat at the hands of the Baker Bowl boys. It was "just one of those things" to the Pittsburghers, whose morale apparently did not suffer much from the experience. Moreover, the Pirates were due to get a good lacing from somebody. They have been smearing most of their rivals, and the fact that they can run into three setbacks in succession and still show a lead of five full games gives them an air of confidence that should stand in their stead later.

What more is there to be told when the Phillies in clinching yesterday's fracas rapped out 15 hits for a total of 14 runs in the fourth and fifth rounds? Perhaps the Pittsburgh pitchers were bad for the day, yet a good hurler is very often a setup for the slugging Shottonites when the festivities are staged in the Baker Bowl. As long as a club can push or pull balls against the joke fence it will make a lot of runs and the Phils naturally have the knack in their own ball park.

MEINE CHASED

Heine Meine was the first victim of yesterday's smashup. Ervin Brame was a soft pushover for Chuck Klein and company, while Spencer and Chagnon just moved along to get the game over. Flint Rhem pitched the entire game for the Phils. Virgil Davis, the Hogan

MACKMEN KEEP PACE WITH YANKS IN AMERICAN

TIGER HURLERS CHECK RUTH; CARDS WIN

Associated Press.

The New York Yankees and Philadelphia Athletics were the day's winners in the abbreviated American League program yesterday.

The Yankees tripped Detroit, 6-3, as Danny MacFayden kept 11 Tiger hits well scattered. Babe Ruth's sensational hitting streak came to an end as Withehill and Wyatt walked him four times after he had been called out on strikes in the first inning.

A'S BEAT TRIBE

Rube Walberg had a slight edge on Wes Ferrell as the Athletics nosed out the Cleveland Indians, 1-0. Ferrell gave up only two hits until the ninth when singles by Cochrane, Foxx and McNair scored the only run of the battle. Walberg was reached for only four hits. It was the A's second 1-0 victory over the Indians in as many days.

Credit for the year's greatest baseball comeback seems to belong almost without question to Flint Rhem, erstwhile playboy of the St. Louis Cardinals and now a consistent winner for Burt Shotton's flailing Phillies.

The righthander whose disregard of training rules and ineffective pitching finally cost him his place in the far-flung Cardinal organization has rolled up a string of eight victories against only two defeats since he joined the Phillies, early in the campaign. For the Cardinals he had won four games and lost two.

PHILS SLUG PIRATES

Rhem's pitching was responsible in no small measure for the Phillies' third straight victory over the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday, 18-5.

Tex Carleton pitched the Cardinals to a 4-to-2 victory over the Boston Braves in the only other game on the National League program. Carleton allowed only seven hits and had sensational support from his teammates, especially Jimmy Reese, who handled 12 chances without a bobble at second base.

TOLAN'S WIN DISPUTED

reception. Tolan loped over and extended a hand of congratulation. The others in the race tossed "cheerios" at Metcalfe. Lawson Robertson, chief coach of the American track and field team, who was directly on the line, thought Metcalfe was the victor by a comfortable margin. Those who had wagered against Metcalfe paid off.

Newspaper bulletins were flashed stating that Metcalfe had won, Tolan was second and Jonath third.

While the crowd sat and waited for something else to happen, and occasionally watched the hammer throwers doing their stunts, the judges continued in a huddle. They huddled and huddled, and then, to the utter astonishment of the crowd, which sat mute during the announcement—and after it—the loud speaker boomed that it was:

"Tolan, first; Metcalfe, second, and Jonath, third."

HOLD UP GIRLS' RACE

Those pondering judges must have realized that they booted something, because, when the semi-final for girls was run, and the finish was close, they took no further "snap judgment." This time they went into 57 different huddles and then repeated the exercises. Meanwhile, the girls who were lined up for the second semi-final were told that the race would be delayed until such time as the judges made up their minds as to who finished where in the first semi-final.

The weird thing about the whole proceeding was that everybody in the press box and those spectators on the finish line had called the exact finish as the girls swept over the mark — a feat which the judges could not do until a delay of almost 30 minutes.

Tolan's time in the 100-meter final (the fastest human race) was 10.3 seconds, equaling the world record.

FOUR MARKS SET

Altogether, the day's spectacular athletic battle involved the equaling of two world records in men's events, a new world mark for women sprinters by the Polish-American girl, Stella Walsh, and the creation of new Olympic standards in four events.

It brought the total of new Olympic track and field records up to nine for only two days of competition.

Although the United States gained its first major objective in winning the 100 meter crown for the first time since Charley Paddock captured it in 1920, and more than doubled its team total of points, the Irish Free State's flag twice flew to the Olympic staffhead to give old Erin more than an ordinary share of honors.

Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan, the 245 pound Irish giant, gave the big crowd a thrill by winning the hammer throw for the second time, with a throw of 176 feet 11⅛ inches, on his final trial.

TISDALL VICTOR

His youthful countryman, Robert Tisdall, an Oxford student, romped to a sensational victory over the 400-meter hurdles. Tisdall experienced the unique sensation of being crowned world champion, but at the same time being deprived of a new world record of 51.8 seconds because he knocked over the last hurdle in his victorious journey. A stride behind him came the young American southerner, Glenn Hardin, who was timed in 52 seconds flat, and forthwith credited with a new Olympic mark besides equaling the world record. Right behind him was the man who set the world record, Morgan Taylor, of the United States, and Lord David Burghley, of England, the 1928 Olympic champion.

Percy Williams, the slim Canadian who startled the world by scampering off with the double Olympic sprint honors in 1928, also was dethroned as America's best dash men had their biggest day since pre-war Olympic times.

The United States took three of the first four places in the 100-meter final as George Simpson, the former Ohio State star, failed by a narrow margin to overhaul Arthur Jonath, German favorite, who took third place.

The South American, Dan Joubert, and Japan's game little sprinter, Yoshioka, finished fifth and sixth to complete the sprinting cast.

U. S. GETS 58 POINTS

As a result of collecting 18 points alone, in the 100 meters, plus scattered places in the hammer throw, and 400-meter hurdles, the United States boosted its two-day total of points to 58 for the men's track and field championships. Ireland meanwhile moved into second place, with 20 points contributed by its two winners, displacing Finland, which wound up the second day with 16. Canada, Poland and Germany had 10 each.

All three Americans qualified in the 3,000-meter steeplechase trial heats, in which the Olympic record twice was broken. Tom Evanston, of Great Britain, trotted in just ahead of Walter Pritchard, American collegian, to cut the mark to 9:18.8, then the sturdy Finnish ace, Volmari Iso-Hollo galloped over the jumps to lead the other two Americans, Joe McCluskey and Glen Dawson, and post a new record of 9:14.6.

For the second straight day, in the Women's track and field competition, the feminine contingent demonstrated how to dispose of world records completely. On the heels of Babe Didrikson's performance for the United States in the javelin, Stella Walsh, the Cleveland girl competing for Poland, lowered the women's 100-meter record to 11.9 seconds.

Miss Walsh — Stanislawa Walasiewicz on the program—easily proved the best of the flying feminine contingent. The former Olympic record of 12.2 seconds, which Miss Walsh also displaced was equalled in the trials by Marie Dollinger, of Germany and Miss Schuurman, but the latter was eliminated in the semi-finals, in the closest race of the afternoon.

Nick Altrock
Baseball's Humorist
Says:

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Maybe the city's school teachers haven't been paid for a couple of months and they had to give the high school graduates I. O. U.'s instead of diplomas, but Chicago still is a grand baseball town. And, when better baseball towns are built, Mrs. O'Leary's cow will kick over the lantern and burn 'em down.

Nick Altrock

It's nothing for 50,000 Chicagoans to pour out to see the Cubs this season, and, if you don't think 50,000 is a crowd, try to grab a street car seat against 'em. Young Mr. Wrigley, the Cubs' proprietor, is making a mint this season.

"And, considering the White Sox haven't been high enough in the standing to get dizzy, the South Side fans have turned out swell, too. Yep, old Chi is a great baseball town, and I don't say so just because the beer is good.

HOLT BEATEN BY KING

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Pittsburgh vs. Uniontown amateur bouts at St. Peter's A. A., arena, North Side.

A tall, rangy, young welterweight named Jack King, from Little Rock, Ark., topped off a long-drawn-out card of boxing bouts at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night by punching out a clean-cut 10-round decision over Billy Holt, Homewood Negro. James (Red) Mason was in his corner, seconding the visitor for the latter's manager, Ray Alvis, of Chicago, and the victory followed a warm reception for Mason as he entered the ring following a long absence from Pittsburgh. The announcer, Harry Klaas, even made a special speech of welcome about Mason before the gong sounded for the battle, and the show took on the appearance of a special Mason night.

King, a bit green, especially on the inside, where Holt outthumped him, nevertheless looked like a good prospect as he outboxed and outfought his man in every round except the fifth. He dropped Billy to his knees for no count in the seventh and jarred him at other times, and, on the whole, gave the local boxer the toughest evening he has had in a long, long time. This despite the fact that the visitor had his left eye cut in the opening round and his right one in the eighth.

M'ARTHUR WINNER

The semi-final 10-rounder was slow and painful, due to the clinching tactics of Harry Williams, Negro light-heavyweight, against Buddy McArthur, of McKeesport, who did all of the fighting, including a lot of solid hitting, to win every round.

Jimmy Vaughn, of Cleveland, beaten by Jimmy Thomas at the Meyers Bowl two weeks ago, came back to thrash Leon Jendrasiak, southpaw featherweight, of Grand Rapids, in the first 10-rounder, a one-sided affair, and Johnny Allen, of Grand Rapids, and Don Asto, of Uniontown, lightweights, boxed in interesting fashion to a referee's draw in the six-round opener, in which Judge Joe Zivic voted for Allen and Judge Meininger and Referee Red Robinson for the even break.

Between Rounds

Ray Newton boxes Frankie Brasio in a preliminary to a Babe Triscaro-Frankie Wolfram bout at Euclid, O., Friday night of next week.

Louis (Kid) Kaplan, former featherweight champion, and Frankie Petrolle box a third time in the semi-final to the Billy Petrolle-Lou Brouillard 5(20) at the Yankee Stadium, New York, Thursday night. Ben Jeby boxes Leo Larives in another eight-rounder.

YANKS GET MOORE

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Manager Joe McCarthy, of the New York Yankees, has announced the trade of Pitcher Gordon Rhodes to the Boston Red Sox for Pitcher Wiley Moore. They will report to their new clubs today. Both are right-handers. Rhodes has been with the Yankee intermittently for about three years and has started only one or two games this season. Moore has been used in a relief role.

LEGION TITLE FRAY TODAY

Swissvale, winner of the state title last year and holder so far of the championship for the southwestern end of the state, will meet Ford City, Northwestern Pennsylvania champion. The teams will clash at Forbes Field, play being called at 5 p. m.

Detroit Star Leads In Qualifying Test

PONTIAC, Mich., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Orm Beaupre, Detroit, shot a sub-par 71-72—143 yesterday, to lead Michigan's six qualifiers for the National Golf Association tournament to be played at St. Paul starting August 30.

The others are: Al Watrous, Detroit, 73-72—145; Tommy Armour, Detroit, 74-72—146; Walter Hagen, Detroit, 75-72—147; Tommy Filmore, Detroit, 72-77—149; Leo Fraser, Saginaw, 71-79—150.

Jose Jurado, the Argentina champion who is playing in the Detroit district this season, tied with Fraser at 150 but shot a 39 to Fraser's 36 in the nine-hole playoff.

U. S. Yacht Leads In Cup Series

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The American yacht Conewago captured the first race of the Canada's Cup series on Lake Ontario here yesterday, after trailing the Canadian challenger Invader II for more than half of the contest.

Sid Carson Beaten In Greensburg Play

Smith will play James Lutterell in the final Saturday afternoon. Larry Heller, defending champion, was eliminated last Saturday.

STALE GAS IS SLOW GAS

ONLY fresh GAS PACKS FULL POWER!

TAKE the best, the fastest gas made—store it too long—and it gets slow, sluggish and feeble! Little by little, day by day, it loses pep, punch and power. STALENESS is the enemy of gasoline!

Here's why this is so . . . Gasoline deteriorates—loses its "light ends"—the volatile elements that make starting easy. A chemical change takes place, too—so that the longer gas is stored, the weaker it gets!

Long has the petroleum industry known this fact. Known, too, that the longer gas is stored, the stickier it gets—the more apt it is to clog valves and knock—particularly on hills.

That is why the question of deterioration has worried refiners—and why Gulf is proud to announce a system that assures you of FRESH, FULL-POWERED gasoline. It works in this way . . .

Gulf makes the best gas that can be produced—and refines out of this gas certain complex elements that have been discovered to cause fast deterioration. Therefore, Gulf gas stays FRESH longer.

Next, Gulf takes that FRESH-MADE gas and speeds it to you in a hurry. Huge Gulf refineries, centrally located in many sections of Gulf territory, furnish every one of the 45,000 Gulf stations with a convenient source of FRESH gasoline. Fast tank trucks speed FRESH gas to Gulf pumps every day. Get your money's worth! Get all the power you pay for. Get FRESH gas—get Gulf. Use it exclusively—your motor will be faster, cleaner, quieter.

get* THAT GOOD GULF GASOLINE—*it's fresh

Still fighting to hold the leadership in the City League the J. L. Thomas nine will invade Homewood this evening to cross bats with Hank Daly's Homewood-Brushton club. Outside of the league rivalry that is natural, there also exists hectic feeling between the fans of the clubs. Plenty of action is expected.

While Thomas is battling out in the East End, the first-half champions, Books, will be at Bellevue clashing with Reliance Life. The Miller aggregation would like to boost its standing at the expense of the Olympic Park outfit.

Leo Carroll, veteran spitball hurler, was handed his release by Dormont last evening following the 5-to-4 setback suffered by the champions at the hands of the Ferris nine.

Carroll protested vigorously when taken from the mound after the Ferris hitters had touched his delivery for several ringing wallops and the club management decided to let him go. He won 10 games and pitched two ties for Dormont this season.

BUCCOS LACED BY PHILLIES

of the Phillies, struck the only homer of the debacle, and would you believe it, the ball did not go over the short fence? It nestled in the leftfield bleachers. Two were on when Davis slapped the ball out of the park. After the fifth it was just a dance for the Quakers.

Don Hurst was struck in the head by one of Glenn Spencer's fast balls in the fifth inning, but an examination disclosed that he was not seriously hurt. He is expected to return to his position in a few days.

After finishing with the Dodgers, the pace setters will invade Boston, where they take part in a five-game series. Two bargain bills are listed at the Hub. The Pirates will be back home to meet the Cubs one week from Thursday.

Chilly Sauce
By Charles J. Doyle

Before the Phillies left Pittsburgh, Dick Bartell, in an unofficial and unsolicited communique, stated the Quakers would see that the Pirates received a good shellacking when they arrived at the bandbox park.

Each and every flag contender in each succeeding year enters the Baker Bowl in fear and trembling. And the so-called kind Quakers take fiendish delight in luring the various favorites into their spider web. The fact that this park and several other joke layouts are tolerated by Judge Landis and other moguls is one of the mysteries of the sport. Few people take the Phillies seriously on the road and they really are a good ball team, yet one that seems to bear the stigma of their home lot.

A trimming like that received by the Buccos may have an exaggerated importance in that the defeated club is the ranking favorite for the flag? But you don't have to go back far in the games played at the Baker Bowl to find countless contests in which the runs have reached double figures. It hasn't been many years back since Pittsburgh clubs would run up football figures while staging farces at the Quaker City.

Needless to state the Pirates will be willing to move out of Philly to make room for the Cubs. Maybe the Quakers will have enough zip left to kick the Bear around for a few days. The Cubs don't do so well while hovering 'neath the shadow of William Penn's statue.

The Pirates played and won more games in July than any other major league team. July was very kind to the team despite a rush of doubleheaders that carried their total of contests up to 38. The National League leaders won no less than 25 battles in the double fortnight.

The Freebooters move from Philly to Brooklyn tonight. Only three games are scheduled for Ebbets Field, the single contests to be interspersed with an open date Friday.

AMATEUR STARS CLASH TODAY

By TOM BIRKS
Staff Correspondent.

Some of the classiest amateurs from the Pittsburgh district, Washington, D. C., and Baltimore, will seek to wrest from the Kiski star the toga that he won last year. Match play will open tomorrow and continue Thursday and Friday.

ELDRED WINS OPEN

Yesterday, Vincent Eldred, Pennsylvania state open champion, from the Highland Country Club, established himself as the leading competitive pro of the district by running away with the Bedford open title, from the classiest field of pros and simon pures that ever competed in the tourney. The Highlander shot two sub-par rounds, 70 in the morning and 69 in the afternoon, for a total of 139, to beat out Al Houghton, of the Capitol Club, of Washington, D. C. Houghton had a 69 in the morning, but slipped in the afternoon, finishing with a 74, three over par, for a total of 143.

Sam Parks, who broke the course record in the amateur qualifying round last year, shot two consistent rounds of 73, to take third money. Wayne Tobias, of Greensburg, was fourth with 148, and Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, fifth with a total of 149.

MARKS GETS 149

Marks, tuning up for his title defense led home a big field of amateurs. He had a 77 in the morning, but shot a brilliant 72 in the afternoon.

The fight for the crown handed down by Pete O'Hara, of Westmoreland, was solely between Eldred and Houghton. The State champion was cool and calculating in his play. Houghton was playing behind Eldred. When the champion finished with a 70, everybody but Houghton figured another prize was in the bag. At the turn, Houghton learned of Eldred's score, so he shot a 32, three under par, to lead the Highlander by a single stroke.

Sir Guy Mac Sets Three Trot Records

SALEM, N. H., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The veteran Sir Guy Mac, owned by Mrs. C. F. Adams, of Framingham, Mass., broke three records yesterday while winning the classified trot, fourth event on the opening Grand Circuit program.

The chestnut son of McGregor the Great was first in each of the three heats. He ran the first in 2:04½, leaving the favorites Maid McElywn and Invader far back. His time bettered the trotter's own record by a minute and set new trotting marks for the track and the state.

CARLSON AT SCHOOL

Dr. Cliff Carlson, Pitt basketball coach, will be one of the speakers at the Basketball Coaching School and Clinic to be held in Massillon, O., August 22 to 27.

LEGION NINES TO MEET

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 2.—(A.P.)—The Morgantown and St. Mary's American Legion junior baseball teams will open their three-game series for the state championship at St. Mary's Thursday.

SEEDED STARS ADVANCE IN PARKS PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Hostilities in the third annual Pittsburgh Public Parks Tennis championships continued this afternoon on the rectangles of Frick and Schenley Parks with wind-up of first and second round men's singles tilts and start of women's singles play comprising ample card. The tourney got under way yesterday.

Seeded favorites emerged from early milling unscathed, three of the select group advancing in consecutive sets, four remaining idle, and one—Alex Blumberger, of Pitt, battling to a canto apiece with a second frame rival, only to run into dusk that rendered further jousting impossible. Blumberger's marathon opponent was Jack Rosen, of Beechview, who, after dropping session one at 4-6, rallied to edge out stanza two at 11-9.

BROIDA VICTOR

Frank Broida, defending champion, first seeded ace, and twice winner of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Challenge Cup, to which he now seeks permanent title through 1932 triumph, inaugurated quest of his third successive crown in auspicious fashion by outdriving Bob McChurkin, North Side star, 6-2, 6-2.

Arlington Park Victors Forget To Collect

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Imagine forgetting to collect $81,050 when all they had to do was call at Arlington Park for it!

Fred Crafton, of the Arlington Park auditing department, was around today looking for M. L. Schwartz, of New York, to hand him that much for Gusto's victory in the classic last month. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney neglected to ask for his $71,790, won by his horses at Arlington, while George D. Widener, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, S. W. Labrot, The Shandon Farm, G. W. Ogle and the Audley Farm Stables, also forgot to take their winnings the grand total of which was $276,0000.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The bond market displayed some mild reactionary signs today, although prices generally held within a narrow range and trading slowed down appreciably. Both French and Belgian 7s improved, but German government bonds were heavy. Japanese issues steadied. United States government loans were quiet and firm.

STOCKS WEAK AFTER LONG ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—The stock market showed signs of fatigue today, after three weeks of almost steadily rising prices, and bullish efforts, concentrated in the copper group, failed to attract a following.

The list turned conspicuously weak in the early afternoon, after the red metal group had been boosted substantially around midday. The list had started to sag at the opening, but soon stiffened. Wall street was not much disturbed over the evident weariness of the market, however, since traders had been inclined to look for a "corrective reaction."

American Telephone, having been up more than a point, showed a loss of a point by early afternoon. Others off 1 to 2 included Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, American Can, Allied Chemical, Case, Woolworth, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, American Tobacco B, United States Steel common, Bethlehem common, Standard of New Jersey and others. United States Steel preferred dropped 3. Rails, utilities and steels were conspicuously heavy. Among coppers and other non-ferrous metals which got up 1 to 2 points in the midday bulge were Kennecott, Howe Sound, Federal Mining, International Silver and St. Joseph Lead, while Phelps Dodge, Anaconda, American Smelting and several others were up fractionally for a time.

Trading was quiet during the morning, but quickened on the afternoon sag. A number of traders had accepted the action of the market in the last half hour yesterday as indicating that a setback was in the offing, as that flurry of selling represented the first time that trading had expanded on a decline since the major upward movement got under way some three weeks ago. In point of percentage gain, the July upswing had been the sharpest of any advance in any similar period of time since the major downward cycle started nearly three years ago, and a number of traders had been surprised that a temporary setback had not come sooner. The foreign buying in this market, which has been talked of so much of late, was said to have dwindled since the middle of last week.

The attempt to move the coppers was evidently predicated on the somewhat better feeling reported in the industry, and rumors that an attempt to mark up the domestic price from the current level of 5¼ per cent a pound to about 7 cents might be done. Prices have been stiffening a little in the foreign markets, and electrolytic futures in London moved up today. An unfavorable factor, however, remains in the huge stocks of metal above ground, which are estimated at more than a year's supply. In view of these large stocks, the domestic producers have not yet tried to take advantage of the recently enacted 4-cent tariff. Some observers saw in the Franco-Belgian tariff accord a discrimination against North and South American copper, in favor of the metal for the Belgian Congo. Among other non-ferrous metals, lead and zinc has firmed somewhat in the domestic market during the past week.

On the whole, business news of the day was not particularly revealing. Some observers thought that the rally in shares could easily be resumed should more tangible indications of seasonal improvement appear. Any real measurement of the autumn recovery, however, will probably have to be deferred until September. There was considerable interest in the possible dividend action of General Motors directors tomorrow, with some quarters looking for another payment of 25 cents on the common.

WHEAT PRICES AGAIN LOWER

CHICAGO, Aug. 2. — Grain prices here underwent an early setback today, influenced by downturns in wheat quotations at Liverpool. Favorable weather for crops in Western Europe was reported and 10 per cent reduction of France's wheat import quota. Opening at ¼-⅜ decline, Chicago wheat futures sagged further afterward. Corn started unchanged to ½ off and subsequently receded all around.

Interest of wheat traders focused on monthly private crop reports which showed an average of 273,000,000 bushels prabable domestic spring wheat production this season, and estimated the domestic winter wheat yield at 440,000,000. These totals were larger than generally expected, and the market soon dropped to more than 3 cents under its recent high point.

Corn and oats prices followed wheat action. Provisions lacked support.

New Commonwealth Issue at Premium

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Bids of 94½ were reported today in the market for the new Commonwealth Edison 30-year 5½s, which are to be offered tomorrow at 93, about a 6 per cent basis. Dealers have orders for more bonds than they are able to get from any source, bond houses report, hence the premium of 1½ bid for the issue. Allotments to dealers were small, while demand appears to have been widespread.

Opportunity For Napoleon Of Agriculture

By B. C. FORBES

WHAT AN opportunity for a Napoleon of Agriculture to bound into the scene!

Farms and farm lands have been sacrificed by the thousand, tens of thousands, at prices probably relatively lower than the absurd prices which have been recorded by many stocks. There have been sales to meet taxes, foreclosures to satisfy mortgages, forced sales at the demand of other lenders.

B. C. Forbes

The supply of farm lands having been so much greater than the demand, and prices for agricultural products having been so unremunerative, the owners of foreclosed farms have naturally been unable to realize anything like a decent price.

Where is the brainy individual who can spring to the front, enlist capital, form an organization to acquire the very pick of the sacrificed farms, install capable management, raise crops or cattle or other most profitable product, and reap for those furnishing the funds an enormous rate of profit?

One reader states that a leading California bank has sold the farms taken over by it to a specially-organized farm corporation and that the results have been such as to warrant similar action on a national scale.

Will the occasion beget the man?

THAT THERE are extraordinary profit possibilities in stepping forward and buying things at phenomenally low prices has been spectacularly demonstrated lately in the nation's chief financial center. Imagine garnering profits of 50 to 200 per cent. In three weeks!

The stock market has offered such opportunities. Hard to believe? It is; but "facts are chiels that winna ding and daurna be disputit." Here are facts, showing recent minimum prices and the recovery achieved up to the beginning of this week:

HERE AND there throughout the country well-managed banks are announcing their readiness to grant loans, either business loans or loans for home-building. This is distinctly encouraging.

I DON'T KNOW what economic significance it may or may not have, but the fact is that "slot machines"—gambling devices—are openly springing up all over New York City, in cheap restaurants, butcher shops, delicatessen stores, everywhere. And they seem to be well patronized.

Incidentally, the number of accounts in mutual savings banks throughout the country increased 72,468 in the first half of this year, making the total 13,432,139, the largest ever.

If August should bring as many helpful developments as July brought, the country would be well on its way to genuine recovery.

Daily Crude Output Down 66,093 Barrels

TULSA, Aug. 2—Daily average production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended July 30, totaled 2,131,666 barrels, a decrease of 66,093 barrels daily from the preceding week, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 2—(AP.)—The Derrick reports that 165 Pennsylvania grade crude oil wells were completed in July compared with 125 in June.

Better Sentiment In Pipe Industry

Further improvement in sentiment is noted among cast iron pipe interests although business has continued limited. A few better inquiries have come out which may result in orders in the near future.

FARMERS' GAIN FORERUNNER OF RECOVERY

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—James C. Stone, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, in a message to this column, expressed the opinion that better prices for agricultural commodities would be the main factor in leading the country out of the present economic difficulties.

In interpreting the meaning of the recent rise in agricultural products, Mr. Stone declared:

Mr. Rukeyser

"The basis of this improvement in livestock, I think, is sound. During the last year, packers have bought more on the hand-to-mouth basis, and, due to the reduction in retail prices of meat and meat products, the products have moved into consumption and the packers are not now loaded up with heavy stocks.

"To add to this favorable condition, the latest report of the Department of Agriculture showed that there was a reduction of some 7 per cent in the 1932 spring pig crop, indicating fewer hogs for market this fall and winter. The number of cattle on feed is also somewhat below a year ago. All these facts led to better feeling and better price.

ROAD OUT OF SLUMP

"Personally, I have never faltered in my belief that better prices for agricultural commodities would be the main factor in leading us out of our present difficulties.

"Another factor which I think is just beginning to be felt is the policy of credit expansion adopted some months ago by the Federal Reserve System, through buying government bonds in the open market.

"I thought at the time that it would take several months before general conditions would begin to show the effects of this new program. I feel now that this happening, and with reasonable interest rates, I think we have reason to hope for a continued improvement.

CONDITIONS SOUNDER

"General conditions seem to me to be on a sounder basis now than at any time in the last three years. As evidence of this there are quite a few commodities enjoying an upward price trend, the action of the bond market for the past month is most encouraging, and the general feeling that the bottom has been reached and that the turn toward better times has been made seems to be increasing on all sides.

"The disappearance of fear, and the feeling of encouragement on the part of so many people that we are now on the upward trend is what we all need most, and one of the things which brought this better feeling about was the gradual improvement which started several weeks ago in the price of livestock."

KANSAS VOTERS FACE DRY ISSUE

TOPEKA, Kans., Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Prohibition, the Federal Farm Board, and a factional struggle over the Democratic administration of normally Republican Kansas, are varied issues which today attracted voters to primary polls in the Sunflower state.

Seven Republicans seek nomination to the senatorial seat vacated by Vice President Curtis, and now occupied by George McGill, Democrat, of Wichita. McGill's single opponent for the Democratic nomination is Chauncey B. Little, former congressman, who advocates repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and abolishment of the Farm Board.

4 MEN ATTACK DRY WITNESS

When Walter France, 49, stepped out of the back door of his house at 914 Federal street at 1 a. m. today four men promptly set upon him.

They were beating him up when Patrolman Michael Welsh arrived in time to prevent serious injury.

France said in North Side Police Court that he believed they had attacked him because he was scheduled to testify today against a North Side speakeasy in Federal Court.

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

From Which M. G. M. Has Made A Motion Picture Starring Marion Davies

Blondie Self-Conscious When She Encounters Broker At Lurline's Place

CHAPTER VIII.

Blondie's knees were shaking with excitement as she walked toward the elevator with Lurline. Never in her life had she been in a building like this. When they stepped into the elevator Blondie was filled with awe and felt inconsequential behind the tall, courteous attendant, who silently closed doors and shot them upward with terrific speed.

As they stepped out of the conveyance on the twentieth floor and walked down the spacious hall, Blondie's feet sank comfortably in heavy carpet. They passed in front of an elaborate door which Lurline opened and then stood aside for the tenement girl to enter.

Blondie stepped through the doorway and let out a little exclamation of surprise. She was in Lurline's bedroom and was completely bewildered by the exquisite sight that met her startled gaze. Beautiful furniture, richly colored drapes, appointments placed with a lavish hand by someone with perfect taste, made it a luxurious spectacle that was a fairy-land to Blondie.

She stood motionless in the center of the floor, drinking in all of the room's beauty. Her gaze finally centered on the low bed, covered with an elaborate silk spread of soft yellow. She approached it and gingerly tested its softness. Lurline watched her furtively, with a superior smile.

"Isn't it a honey? Try it," Lurline invited cordially. "Make yourself at home. I'll be back in a minute."

As Lurline went out, Blondie sunk into the softest bed she had ever known.

OTHERS PRESENT

Lurline hurried down the spacious hallway of her apartment toward the living room. She seemed to glide in the soft, rich carpet. She swung open one of the huge glass doors that closed off the living room from the hall, crossed a low, wide balcony, and stood at the top of three steps, gazing into the lavishly furnished room.

Lurline saw Larry Belmont and another man seated at a low backgammon table, intent on their game. Larry had the dice, and Lurline watched him throw. A tall, boyish looking man, with a serious, good-looking face, that became pleasantly humorous when he smiled, Larry was one of Wall street's most successful young brokers. Lurline stepped down into the room, and the other man arose as Larry made his move on the board.

"Hello, boy!" Lurline said, as she kissed the top of Larry's head.

"Oh, hello. This is Mortimer Pratt, Lurline."

The introduction acknowledged, both men resumed their seats.

"How is your mother?" Larry asked. Did she like the cake?"

"She adored it. Sweet of you to remember. But I'm very cross. Did you hang up or were we cut off?"

"Cut off," said Larry, a little impatiently, without looking up. "Your throw, Pratt."

"Pratt!" exclaimed Lurline, manifesting interest. "Oil! The girls were talking about you the other day in the dressing room. We didn't know whether it was 20 or 30,000 . . . barrels, isn't it, you get oil in?"

"Thirty," Pratt answered Lurline, without looking up.

"Oh, thirty!" and Lurline started to leave. "I'm so glad to know," she drawled as she walked out.

"Nice?" questioned Larry.

"Nice," Pratt replied. "Your play." Larry cast the dice and the game was on again.

As Lurline went down the hall to her bedroom she undressed on the way. She entered to find Blondie stretched out on her back across the bed, her arms wide above her head, drinking in more luxury than she had ever dreamed of.

"Cocktail time," Lurline greeted, and Blondie turned over to watch her curiously. "Every day the same little gang come."

Lurline was undressing quickly now, and the maid entered the room, going to the black-tiled bathroom where she turned on the water.

"Quel parfum pour le bain, mademoiselle?" the maid asked.

"Now, let me see . . ." Lurline said. "Your folks liked that perfume today, didn't they?"

"They sure did," Blondie replied.

AN EXCITING ENCOUNTER

Blondie watched her through the door with deep interest as she sprinkled something in the bath. Curiosity getting the better of her, she rose and went to the maid.

"What a smell!" said Blondie, taking a whiff from the bottle.

Lurline entered the bathroom in a satin dressing gown, trimmed with white fox, and Blondie stared, fascinated. She was thinking of the old gray flannel bathrobe her mother had made her five years ago, which she was still wearing.

"Vite, vete, je pressais." Lurline was putting it on for Blondie now, taking every advantage of the tenement girl's curiosity and her own lavish surroundings. She stepped lightly into the tub, and said:

"Oh, sure!" And Blondie backed to the door, trying to seem unconcerned.

"Le pajam noir," Lurline said in her atrocious French.

"What?" asked Blondie.

"I was talking to Madelon."

"Oh, sure," and Blondie went out, closing the door. She walked over to an elaborate dressing table in the corner and stood contemplating its array of odd shaped, glistening bottles, when the outer door burst open. Larry Belmont entered, walking quickly towards the bathroom.

"Hey—you—Lurline!" he called. He was just about to open the door when Blondie stopped him. Larry turned at her sharp "Hey, you!" and Blondie stood still, her eyes wide with excitement.

"Oh, hello!" Larry said cordially, taking a step toward her. "I didn't see you there."

Blondie tried her best to acknowledge the greeting, but words just wouldn't come. Never had she seen a man like this—why, he was even handsomer than any of her movie heroes! As Larry, grinning broadly now and very friendly, looked at her, Blondie suddenly became conscious of her shabbiness. She felt completely out of place before this well-groomed man, and in these gorgeous surroundings. She started edging slowly toward the bathroom door, never taking her eyes from his face.

"Oh, please don't go," said Larry, seeing her intention, but still smiling broadly.

But Blondie, yet unable to find words for an answer, kept moving toward the door. As she reached it, she turned suddenly, entered the bathroom, and closed the door tightly behind her. And her heart was beating a rat-a-tat-tat!

"Just a hurried tub," said Lurline. (Billie Dove, as Lurline Cavendish.)

Synopsis

Blondie McClune and Lottie Callahan, friends since childhood, work in the same store. After work one evening, Lottie says she has a date and asks Blondie to join her. Blondie disapproves. Two men wait for them outside the building. When one becomes too familiar with her, Blondie slaps his face and goes home alone, to the poor section of the city. Later the two girls argue about the date and it ends in a rough and tumble fight. Blondie's dress is torn and she decides to get a new one. Looking for some money she had saved, she discovers that somebody has taken it. She greets her ailing dad when he arrives home and learns that he has lost his job. Lottie leaves home in quest of a career. After a few months, under the name of Lurline Cavendish, she becomes the newest sensation of the Follies. She visits the McClunes, but is anxious to get away from the place she once called her home.

CONTEST HELD

Quite a number of good laughs were had by the members of the Rowland Theater chapter of the Junior Komic Club Saturday when Miss Mildred Rotthoff, assistant cashier of the Rowland Theater, announced that the next number on the program would be a cracker-eating contest for boys and girls. Eight boys came to the stage and each received two large soda crackers. The boy who finished first and could whistle "Yankee Doodle" was judged the winner and received a mushball as first prize. This was won by Frank Cocivera. Second prize went to Billy Withrow. This was a scooter skate.

The members were then entertained by the Rowland Junior Komic Club orchestra under the direction of John Gilbert. This orchestra, which was organized just a short time ago, has proven popular with the kiddies and the members take delight in singing the songs that they play.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

Virginia Eberle next offered an acrobatic toe tap which the children enjoyed, and Betty Hazelette sang "Snuggle on Your Shoulder." Hubert Gillette offered a harmonica solo, and Valle Ann Corkan sang "Keeping Out of Mischief Now." Leah Smith did an acrobatic dance, and the program was closed with Virginia Eberle singing "Put the Sun Back in the Sky."

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend, to the secretary, Junior Komic Club, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a membership card and button will be mailed you.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Thrilled by Dicky's Effort to Curb Jealousy

I did Dicky the justice of realizing that he was trying hard to conquer the jealous resentment against Hugh Grantland which seized him at almost every reference to the imminent [illegible] our guests. And when [illegible]alow was all swept [illegible]ished" for the reception [illegible]he visitors, and their supper all ready for the "heating up" process that Lillian had recommended, I went to my room for the five minutes' rest and quiet that my nerves were imperatively demanding. There came a flash of understanding to me which cleared up something that had puzzled me—the prompt gibing and horseplay from Harry Underwood that had inevitably accompanied any sign of outbreak upon Dicky's part.

Dicky had asked his old friend thus to check him when his temper threatened to get the better of him! I knew it as well as if I had heard the colloquy between the two men arranging it. They were upon such terms of friendship "passing the love of brothers" that either could ask anything of the other without hesitancy or sensitiveness. To no one else in the world save Lillian and me would Dicky have acknowledged his jealousy of Hugh Grantland. But I do not think either man has any secret from the other, and I could visualize the humorous frankness with which Dicky had confided to his big friend his inability to keep from caustic comments upon the guests for whom we were making such elaborate preparations.

SURPRISED BY CONFESSION

Any wife will realize the tenderness with which I laughed quietly to myself as this illuminative knowledge came to me. He was trying so hard to be good! I felt in that moment as I might toward Junior in his boyish efforts to overcome some fault that he knows will grieve me.

Dicky never had surprised me more than when earlier in the Summer he had confessed to me the fear of Hugh Grantland's winning my love from him, that always had been his. He had told me that his apparent rancor against Philip Veritzen and Allen Drake, with both of whom I had been closely associated in professional work, had been only on the surface, born of his natural jealousy of seeing me admired by other men, and that he had had no real fear that I ever would become seriously interested in either man. But he had recounted Hugh Grantland's long and selfless devotion to me, had declared that Hugh surpassed him upon every count, and wound up with the broken paraphrasing, "He's a better man than I am, Gungha Din," in a shaken voice that had made me clasp him close in tempestuous embrace the while I assured him that Hugh Grantland nor any other man save himself had ever won my love. Yet even in that moment of exaltation, though I knew that I had spoken the truth, one of the things he had said had echoed warningly in my ears.

DANGEROUS SITUATION

"You never had any feeling save admiration and friendly comradeship for either Drake or Veritzen"—this was his speech in effect—"but you have come nearer to loving Hugh Grantland than you know. If you had not been married to me, you would have fallen for him, and what's eating me is that you may yet come to realize how infinitely better a husband he would be than I have been."

His last statement I never would acknowledge, even in the most secret hiding place of my heart, but the other—that if I had not known Dicky I would have fallen in love with Hugh Grantland—that I could not gainsay—honestly. I knew also—and knew that Lillian had guessed my feeling—that upon one or two occasions when Dicky has signally failed me, and when I had been most miserable in consequence, the thought of Hugh's unfailing tender devotion asking nothing but to serve me, had been dangerously comforting.

But that was all past now, and I knew "beyond all doubting, truly," where my heart's happiness lay. With a sudden impulse, I went to the speaking tube that connects my room with the kitchen, and called Katie, still at work upon preparations for the guests.

"Will you ask Mr. Graham to come up to my room a minute, please?" I asked.

"Yah, I tell heem qveeck," Katie called back, and I waited tremulously, dreading, yet longing for my husband's presence until his knock sounded upon the door.

WHEN DREAMS COME TRUE

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat)

Elbert Mann left, Saturday evening, for Kansas City, where he will enter Williams Institute of Embalming. Since Elbert was a lad he has insisted that he wanted to be an embalmer. He would gladly have gone in to learn this art of the mortician, when he was through high school, but his parents told him that they preferred that he take at least a year in college. When he had done that, if his hankerin' to become a mortician still persisted, then they were ready to help him prepare himself for this work. He took the year in college and still said he wanted to be an embalmer.

INSIDE INFORMATION ON OLYMPIC GAMES

LOS ANGELES.—John Gumbo, the flash from Terra del Fuego, does not say he'll win the 50-metre finals in the Olympic Games. On the other hand, he will not say that he won't. He just sulks. The above picture was taken the other day during the preliminary heats. John likes a muddy track—and won't start if it doesn't look like rain. Officials are rather puzzled, because they sincerely want to promote international good will. They've done everything they can think of to interest John in the race and get him to run when the starter fires a pistol. So far he has not responded. Tomorrow a new plan will be adopted. Instead of shooting off a pistol behind John, they're going to massage him with a ton of brick.

Investigation in Order

Even If Ainey Should Resign a Thorough Inquiry Into the Utilities Situation Is Desirable,

Gov. Pinchot's charge that Chairman Ainey, of the Public Service Commission, accepted financial favors from public utilities officials offers a convenient medium through which the utilities situation can be investigated.

There has been some talk to the effect that Ainey may forestall the possibility of trial and removal by resigning. From the standpoint of the public it might be better if he would stand by his guns and demand a complete airing of the charges. This would furnish an opportunity to bring to the light many things in the public utilities situation in Pennsylvania that are now obscure.

Why has the Public Service Commission favored the utilities companies so consistently in contests between them and the people?

Why has it granted the Philadelphia Company, for example, a monopoly of bus service in Pittsburgh and allowed it to charge 25 cents for a short ride that would cost only a dime in other cities?

It seems not improbable that inquiry into the charge that Chairman Ainey received favors from an official of the Philadelphia Company might furnish an explanation.

The 25-cent bus fare is mentioned only because it is a matter on which Pittsburghers feel strongly. There are many other queer things in utility rates and practices here and elsewhere in Pennsylvania that require clearing up. The Senate has it in its power, in the Ainey affair, to furnish the requisite illumination.

This is another important question to which a utilities investigation might furnish an answer.

Another vital element in the business is that if bribes were given, the public welfare demands that the bribe-givers be brought to book.

From several standpoints an investigation appears imperative, and the Senate should see that one is made, regardless of what Ainey may do.

The Legislature should have investigated the utilities situation during the session of 1931. It dodged the business with a half-hearted gesture.

There must be no more dodging.

Vital Public Business

The Killing of the Volpes Cannot Be Dismissed as a Private Quarrel Between Rival Gangs,

One reason why so many assassinations of racketeers and their henchmen go unpunished is because both the police and the public show a disposition to regard these murders as private quarrels between rival gangs and as matters with which the public has no great concern.

Gang leaders and followers foster this feeling by refusing to help the police, and by saying they will take care of the business themselves in their own way.

Too often the average citizen shrugs his shoulders and accepts the situation as something in which nothing can be done. Indolent, indifferent or inefficient policemen are only too ready, of course, to agree.

In the interest of the people's safety the killing of the three Volpe brothers on Wylie avenue Friday must not thus be disregarded.

The Volpes were not high-class citizens, but that does not excuse the police from searching for the murderers with all possible zeal and energy.

The assassinations are not to be considered as a private, personal matter, but as vital public business requiring unremitting attention.

'Dry' Texas Recants

It Is the Duty of Congress to Modify the Volstead Law, as the Country Demands.

Texas no longer will be referred to by the prohibitionists as "eternally dry."

The referendum on submitting the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the people went for submission by a vote of nearly three to one.

Senator Morris Sheppard, the author of the Eighteenth Amendment, who has stood fixedly against every attempt to question its sanctity and has resisted every proposal to submit the question of repeal to the people, promised to abide by the result of the referendum. He now finds himself bound to vote in favor of submission.

With North Carolina's recent choice of a wet candidate for the United States Senate and the result of the Texas referendum, it is difficult to see where the "eternally dry" states, upon which the prohibitionists rely for the defeat of repeal, are to be found. No states have been more dry than North Carolina and Texas. Now even they have succumbed to the nation-wide sweep for repeal.

Clearer every day becomes the duty of Congress to accede to the country's demand for the UNDELAYED MODIFICATION OF THE VOLSTEAD LAW.

This should not wait upon the convening of the Congress to be elected next November. IT SHOULD BE PASSED PROMPTLY BY THE PRESENT CONGRESS at the opening of its second session in December.

The Treasury needs the revenue which would flow from such action by Congress, and PUBLIC OPINION which has been shown to be so UNANIMOUS AND OVERWHELMING throughout the country, including states hitherto supposed to be unalterably dry, IS ENTITLED TO THAT DEGREE OF RECOGNITION by the elected representatives of the people.

Wharf Improvements

Cleaning Up the Water Front Will Do Much to Improve The Appearance of the City.

It is gratifying to find Congressman Estep's plan to improve the wharves with a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation gaining in favor.

Director Lang, of the Department of Public Works, has come out in support of the proposal and a number of other public officials are known to look upon it approvingly.

It would be interesting to get the views of the civic and trade bodies.

While there may be difference of opinion as to how the improvements can best be effected, there can be no questioning the statement that cleaning up the water front will go a long way towards improving the appearance of the city.

Dying lies the smitten serpent

That its deadly fangs have poisoned.

Though a heavy stone has crushed it,
Still the tail continues active
In a futile, angry writhing
Till the sinking sun has vanished.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Five persons decide the fitness of applicants for that bluest of all blue books—The Social Register. Out of 7,000,000 in New York, the American Mercury finds 27,000 are eligible for the next issue. To many it is the fruition of an impossible dream.

To still others, it merely means more advertising trivia in their mail. So much so, one testy dowager ordered her name removed. The idea for the register was incubated by Louis Keller, a bonvivant of the 80's. The tome sells for $7, biggest patrons being exclusive shops and newspapers.

Judges for admission are human icebergs. Only class counts. Riches mean nothing. The slightest taint of scandal and out they go, although ancestors may have come over on the Mayflower. One newly-rich is reputed to have offered $200,000 for the inclusion of his name and was refused.

One member of a family may be listed and other members omitted. The Felix Warburgs are not included, but the banker, Otto Kahn, is. Two New York newspaper writers, Arthur Brisbane and Maury Paul, are catalogued. There are few stage people. Exceptions are Ruth Draper and Mrs. August Belmont.

There was a debate over admitting Col. Lindbergh. The heiress, Polly Lauder, was omitted for marrying the boxing gentleman, Gene Tunney. Ellen Mackay was snooted when she married the rag-time king, Irving Berlin. Charles M. Schwab, for no apparent reason, is not included.

Those with a Gay Ninety memory are hearing again of a mauve decade favorite—the pug dog. The pug's first sponsor was King William II of England, and no dog received greater reception in America. Influx of breeds from Russia, England and Scotland put him out of the running.

Full grown, the pug weighs around 15 pounds and has a glossy coat of apricot fawn, although there are a few of silvery black. He is the prince of lap dogs. Asthma, which gave him an accordion wheeze, can be eliminated by diet.

The belle—and deservedly—of our town, Bezette Newsome, came back from Atlantic City with the first pug, collared in pink ribbon with a fluffy side bow. It was named "Janice Meredith," for a popular novel of the day. I was privileged to guard Janice one day while her owner went into Miss Belle Coffman's millinery shop. A farmer on horse-back drew up, looked her over, and inquired: "Where'd you trap it, Bud?"

Senator William E. Borah's party bolt recently recalls Irvin Cobb's jet of sheer absurdity at a banquet attended by the Idaho Senator. After a few opening remarks, he observed: "I'm glad to see Senator Borah here. I am very fond of the Senator. In fact, I have a real affection for him. He is one person who has never disappointed me. He is always wrong."

In collating old papers on the desk today, I came upon a joyous note from the late Kin Hubbard, beloved Abe Martin philosopher. Outside of Mark Twain, no humorist is so lamentably missed. With divine naivete, he transfused the philosophy of the sullen ploughlands into rib-cracking humor. Under his magic, the awkward cornstubble became a graceful floss of silk. How appropriate today, his paragraph of eight years ago! He wrote: "Lafe Bud, whose father is critically ill, has joined the regular army to keep from inheriting the farm."

Kin was an anomaly in the Indianapolis newspaper shop where he turned out his unpredictably grotesque drawing and the two unrelated paragraphic hodgepodges underneath. He arose at dawn, went to the office and finished the chore as the staff arrived. In Miami Beach, one winter, we were neighbors for the season, and dropped around to call on Will Rogers, in town for a lecture. True to his early rising habits, Kin called at my cottage at 7 a. m., and we reached Rogers' hotel at 7:30. Bill wasn't up and we waited until 8 a. m. When he appeared he asked if we had been waiting long. "All forenoon," snapped Kin.

And in Jim Quirk's Photoplay I read of an actress with "teeth like the stars." What's that? Lots of us have molars that have been coming out at night since I don't know when.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"I'm busted!" you cry;
"I've lost everything I had!"
Well, what have you lost?
What did you have?
"I had a great job," you say,
"And a nice apartment,
"And some slick furniture,
"And a good little car,
"And plenty of swell clothes,
"And a bank account;
"But now I haven't anything!
"My job's gone,
"The bank's busted,
"I've lost my apartment,
"My clothes, my car,
"Everything!
"I'm wiped out!"

You're wrong;
You're not wiped out.
Some things you had accumulated
Were wiped out,
But you weren't.
Those things weren't YOU.
They were just knick-knacks
And stage settings,
Pleasing to have around,
But they had nothing to do
With the secret, essential You;
They weren't your real assets,
Nor your real tools.
Your power and happiness
didn't depend on them.
It may hurt to lose them,
It may cause inconvenience,
But such loss can't possibly wipe you out.
There's just as much of you left
As there ever was.

All that you ever really were,
All that you ever really had,
You still are,
You still have...

What were you, really?
What did you really have?
You were a living spirit
With a mind and a heart
Which possessed the power
To work and play,

Love and hate,
Dream and desire,
Scheme and fight.
And you owned—what?
Your own character,
With whatever courage and wisdom,
Honest and decency
You had developed.

You possessed YOURSELF,
And that was all you did possess,
Or ever can possess.
The other things
Were just trimmings,
Only your own character
Had meaning, or value, or power.
You possessed YOURSELF.
You still possess yourself.
Depression can't take that from you.
Nobody but yourself
Can destroy or waste yourself,
Or a single attribute
That belongs to you.

Wiped out?
Baloney!
You've all you ever had;
You're all you ever were.
Then why are you beefing?
You made good once;
You can make good again,
With the same equipment
Then stop the grouchin'!
Snap out of the wallowing!
Get up and get going!
SCRAM!

The St. Lawrence Pact

Canadians Feel They Have Scored a Diplomatic Victory Over the United States,

By M. GRATTAN O'LEARY

Noted Canadian Editor and Journalist.

"ALMOST too good to be true."

This sentence, used by more than one leading newspaper, sums up Canadian reaction to the St. Lawrence waterway treaty. The Dominion's traditional attitude toward Washington diplomacy has been one of suspicion.

In the St. Lawrence treaty, however, Canadians believe that OTTAWA, NOT WASHINGTON, scored a national and diplomatic victory, that it is the most favorable agreement ever made with the United States, more favorable than the Dominion had reason to expect. In support of this belief they point to vital clauses in the treaty which concede to Canada practically all of the conditions and guarantees long insisted upon by the most jealous guardians of Canadian rights, as follows:

1. Congress must ratify the treaty before the Dominion Parliament is asked to do so.

2. The cost of the undertaking is to be borne mainly by the United States.

3. The Canadian two-stage plan in the international section is adopted in place of the United States single-stage plan.

4. Canadian sovereignty over the works in Canadian waters is absolutely established.

5. Canada retains the right to construct an all-Canadian waterway, at any time in the future, if the expenditure involved in such an undertaking is deemed advisable.

6. The St. Lawrence waterway development means that Canada will obtain 4,000,000 horsepower as against 1,000,000 horsepower for the United States.

FROM the standpoint of navigation and transportation the Canadian people regard the treaty as of great importance not only to themselves, but to Britain and the Empire.

The United States, they point out, has abandoned its ancient contention that Lake Michigan is an "American lake." That great body of water has become, through this new treaty, an international lake, belonging to the St. Lawrence watershed instead of to the Mississippi watershed.

It is stipulated, too, in one of the articles of the treaty, that all British shipping in all parts of the Empire shall have the right to navigation in the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence waterway FOR ALL TIME. This means that all British ships as well as all Canadian ships shall have access through the deepened water channels to the head of Lake Superior; the Great Lakes becoming merged with the ocean, becoming the Mediterranean Sea of North America.

THE treaty puts an end to Chicago's ambition to drain the Great Lakes for the benefit of a deep waterway to the Gulf of Mexico by way of the Mississippi Valley. It provides that the abstraction of water through the Chicago drainage canal shall be reduced by September 31, 1938, to an amount not exceeding an annual average of 1,500 cubic feet per second, in addition to the domestic pumpage by the city of Chicago. This means that for the first time in history the United States has agreed to place the abstraction of water from Lake Michigan UNDER INTERNATIONAL CONTROL; that Lake Michigan is admitted to be an international waterway; that hereafter it cannot be exploited for the increased benefit of the Mississippi watershed.

Canada gains another victory, too, over the so-called Ogoki diversion. The waters of Ogoki Lake, lying north of Lake Superior, and finding an outlet in Hudson Bay, can be diverted into Lake Nipigon, and thus into the St. Lawrence River system. Canada, under the treaty, gains the right to divert 4,000 cubic feet per second of water into Lake Nipigon for use in power development. It is estimated that this additional flow of water will provide 520,000 horsepower, ALL OF IT TO BELONG TO CANADA.

Canada has done famously in the matter of power. Canada is to obtain 4,000,000 horsepower and the United States 1,000,000 horsepower out of the whole St. Lawrence waterway development—a basis of four to one. For Canada the combination of cheap power and transportation facilities will be one of the most remarkable in the world.

All—assuming that the treaty is ratified—at an astonishingly low Canadian cost. The treaty provides that the cost of the deep waterways to the Dominion treasury will be $38,071,000.

THE cost to the United States, on the other hand, is placed at $243,661,000. Canada is given credit for $128,000,000 spent on the new Welland Canal.

Most of the construction work will be done in Canada. Though the United States is to provide the $54,718,000 for works situated on the Canadian side of the international rapids section, CANADIAN ENGINEERS, CANADIAN LABOR AND CANADIAN MATERIALS are to be used. All the labor and materials employed in the Canadian power development at Chrysler Island and Barnhart Island power plants is to be paid for by the Ontario government and will, of course, be Canadian. Article 5 of the treaty was deliberately inserted to protect Canadian sovereignty over all structures lying on the Canadian side, EVEN THOUGH THE STRUCTURES BE BUILT WITH UNITED STATES MONEY.

Canada retains the specific right to construct at any time in the future, wholly within its own territory, alternative channel and canal facilities along the Great Lakes or in the St. Lawrence River, including the international section of the St. Lawrence.

The treaty is an extraordinarily favorable one FOR CANADA. It gives the Dominion and the Empire a great waterway transportation system at an amazingly low cost. It provides for the development of an additional 4,000,000 of Canadian horsepower. It insures that in future the bulk of Canadian traffic will go through Canadian ports. And it protects, in every respect, Canadian sovereign rights. It could not have been more favorable to Canada.
